EIGHT HURT IN UPSET OF RAMBAUD AUTO

Pasteur Institute Head and His Wife, Mme. Gerville-Reache, Most Seriously Injured.

HITS CURVE AT HIGH SPEED

Car Turns Over Four Times Near Poughkeepsie —Dr. Rambaud May Die—Baby Escapes.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Aug. 2.—Running at a high rate of speed, a big touring car owned by Dr. George G. Rambaud, head of the Pasteur Institute of New York, and a party of nine, including the chauffeur and an Adirondack guide, leaped out of the roadway at a sharp turn in the creek road at the Violet Avenue junction, near the Edward Tompkins place, five miles north of this city, this morning. The car turned over four times, and all but Paul Rambaud, the two-year-old son of the doctor, were hurt. The boy escaped without a scratch.

Mrs. Rambaud, who is Mme. Gerville-Reache, a well-known opera singer, was severely hurt.

Dr. Rambaud was driving when the car took the leap. The occupants were hurled out the first time it turned over. Had they remained in the car for another turn it is not believed that one of them would have escaped alive.

The injured are:

GERVILLE-REACHE, Mlle. VALENTINE, sister of Mme. Rambaud; concussion of the brain and possible internal injuries.

GERVILLE-REACHE, JEAN, of Paris, an artist; three ribs and collar bone broken.

JACQUET, ALBERT, chauffeur for Dr. Rambaud; bruised about the head and body.

LEURENT, Mlle. LEMOYNE, niece of Dr. Rambaud; injured internally.

LEURENT, Mlle. PAULETTE, of Paris, niece of Dr. Rambaud; concussion of the brain.

RAMBAUD, Dr. GEORGE, New York; internal injuries and bruises on the body.

RAMBAUD, Mme. GERVILLE-REACHE, wife of Dr. Rambaud; injured about the hips.

STYLES, KINSLEY, Adirondack guide, broken rib.

The injured were first attended by Drs. John H. Cotter and John A. Card of this city and then brought to Vassar Hospital here. Dr. Rambaud's condition is considered very serious because of the probability of internal injuries. The others are expected to recover. They are all at the hospital.

W. H. Eckert, a Poughkeepsie carpenter, happened on the scene a few moments after the car turned over. He first came upon a woman running up and down the road beating the air frantically. She told the story of the wreck and Eckert went for aid.

Eckert was compelled to go a mile before he came to a farmhouse that had a telephone. The family was not at home. Eckert broke in a window and telephoned to the police here and asked for medical aid.

The turn in the road is the worst in this section. It is about two miles south of East Park and about four miles north of Poughkeepsie. The Rambaud car was running south, and it is said that it was running as fast as thirty miles an hour. Being unfamiliar with the road, the doctor did not know of the dangerous turn, and he did not observe the sharp bend until he was upon it. It was then too late for him to prevent the accident.

The doctor turned his car sharply, making the best move that he possibly could, to save the auto and its occupants, but the big car struck the curve like a shot and whirled over on the outer side of the roadway like a toy.

Dr. Rambaud and his family left Albany this morning, having arrived at that place yesterday from Saranac Lake, where they had been spending their vacation.

Racing down the fine road at the rate of thirty miles an hour, the doctor turned on more power. When the car had gone for some distance Dr. Rambaud noticed a house beside the road, but failed to see the sharp curve just below it. It is thought that the building obscured his view. He realized, however, when he had got within a short distance of the curve that the car could not make it at the speed it was then going.

Dr. Rambaud applied the brakes immediately. The jar snapped the brake, causing a part of the mechanism to fall underneath the car.

The next instant the car turned turtle. All the occupants were thrown out. The car turned three times more, but none of the passengers was carried with it.

Dr. Rambaud has been conscious part of the time, but the surgeons fear that the internal trouble may cause his death. Dr. Wilson, assistant to Dr. Rambaud at the Pasteur Institute, arrived here to-night, and is at Vassar Hospital.

The chauffeur went to New York this afternoon. The other members of the party are in the hospital. Mrs. Rambaud and the other women suffered greatly from shock but the physicians believe they will all recover.

Dr. George Gibier Rambaud is head of the Pasteur Institute in this country and one of the leading authorities on the treatment of rabies and other bacteriological diseases. He has been head of the institute here for ten years. Dr. Rambaud was born at Arthon, France, on May 3, 1875. He is a graduate of the French University, and also received the degree of M. D., from Columbia in 1899. He became Director of the New York Pasteur Institute in 1900, after the death of Paul Gibier, his uncle. He introduced a new operation for serum treatment of tetanus, and performed the first of these operations in this country in 1900. He devised an improvement in dispensing vaccine lymph in 1904, which is now in general use. He is a member of many medical and scientific bodies both here and in Europe. He has frequently contributed to the literature of rabies and tetanus, on which diseases he is held by many to be this country's leading authority.

Mme. Gerville-Reache is his second wife. His first wife was Miss Lulu Fowler Bryan of Houston, Texas. She was married to Dr. Rambaud in 1900 in Houston. She divorced him two years ago. She met him first as a patient in his institute, having been bitten by a pet cat. She was hurried to this city with symptoms of rabies. The symptoms subsided under Dr. Rambaud's treatment and the marriage occurred in a few months. The cause of the divorce proceedings two years ago was not disclosed.

The marriage of Dr. Rambaud and Mme. Gerville-Reache took place last November in Jersey, and was kept secret for a time. Mme. Gerville-Reache was at that time leading contralto at the Manhattan Opera House.

They met in this city three years ago, when she was Mr. Hammerstein's leading contralto and while Dr. Rambaud was still married to his first wife. They are said to have become attached to each other because they discovered that Dr. Rambaud had known Mme. Gerville-Reache's relatives in Paris. Dr. Rambaud's attention to Mme. Gerville-

WANT ATLANTIC CITY CLOSER

Railroads Urged to Cut Running Time from New York Down to 2 Hrs. 15 Min.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 2.—Reading and Central Railroad of New Jersey officials are now being urged to put on an express train between New York and this city that will make the run in two and a quarter hours. The railroad men practically admit that the plan is under consideration.

The time now on both the Pennsylvania and New Jersey Central roads is three hours. Hotel men, who have a big New York patronage, have for a long time been urging the railroad people to cut down the time in order to attract more business from New York, but until now the railroads have given them little encouragement. The hotel men say that if the time can be cut to two hours and fifteen minutes that their business will be nearly or quite doubled.

Real estate brokers are also backing the movement for better time. They are of the opinion that cutting the time will be the means of inducing a great many New Yorkers to buy lots and build Summer homes at the shore. They want to make a second Newport of Atlantic City, and say the only thing that prevents is the time used by the railroads in getting people to and from New York.

A report that the change is in contemplation got out here yesterday. It is hoped that the new schedule will be put in effect about the middle of September.

TREATIES READY FOR SIGNING

Bryce Makes Special Journey to Washington—France Also Signs Treaty.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Ambassador James Bryce of Great Britain will arrive in Washington from Seal Harbor, Me., at 1:30 to-morrow afternoon to sign the general arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain. Everything is now in readiness for the signing of the treaties with both Great Britain and France at 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. Immediately after he signs the convention, Ambassador Bryce will return to his Summer embassy at Seal Harbor.

No great confidence is expressed by Senators in the speedy ratification of the British treaty. The question has been informally discussed among members of the Foreign Relations Committee, and some have expressed the opinion that it is technically defective in the methods provided for bringing subjects before the arbitration tribunal.

In case of adjournment next week it would be difficult to obtain action during the present session on either of the treaties.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—It is arranged that the Franco-American arbitration treaty will be signed at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, Paris time, at the Foreign Office, by Jean J. Jusserand, the French Ambassador to the United States, on behalf of France. Two copies containing the text in English and French, respectively, will be signed. One will be retained here and the other sent to Washington to receive the signature of Secretary Knox.

The French law relating to treaty making provides that treaties may be entered into subject to constitutional requirements. This is vague as to whether the sanction of Parliament is necessary. Therefore the Cabinet will decide whether the present treaty will be submitted to Parliament for ratification.

HOLD DELABARRE'S GIFTS.

Widow Fails in Action to Recover Property from Nurse.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 2.—The action to set aside the will of Dr. Walter Delabarre and to tie up certain properties held by the Rosemount Realty Company and the West Side Bank of New York has been dismissed by Supreme Court Justice Mills.

Dr. Delabarre died on Oct. 30, 1910, leaving all he possessed to Miss Anna S. Zees, a nurse who cared for him in the last years of his life. It is said that his personal possessions at the time of his death amounted to only a few dollars. Mrs. Frances Freeland Delabarre, the widow, allowed the will to be probated, but started a contest in the Supreme Court, alleging that Miss Zees used undue influence to have her husband transfer real estate worth about $100,000 to the Rosemount Realty Company, of which the nurse is a stockholder, and to open a joint account with her in the West Side Bank.

Justice Mills says Mrs. Delabarre cannot maintain an action to test the validity of the gifts to Miss Zees, until the action to set aside the will is successful. In the meantime Miss Zees may do anything she pleases with the property in her possession.

LAYS HER OWN SIDEWALK.

Newark Woman Simply Wouldn't Pay Contractors' High Prices.

The City of Newark has been repairing and repaving Congress Street and compelled the property owners to repave their sidewalks. Most of them put in concrete walks. Mrs. Mary C. King, who lives at 187, has put in the finest-looking walk, and she declares it is going to last longer and wear better than those of her neighbors.

When Mrs. King considered the contractors' prices too high she watched the men lay the walks of her neighbors, and when she had seen all that was to be seen she tried an experiment, and was so pleased with her success that she caused her walk to be excavated, bought cement, sand, and lampblack, and proceeded to mix and lay her own walk. She says she can buy several new dresses out of what she saved.

INCENDIARY BURNS TOWN.

Residents of Trappe Fighting Forest Fire When Flames Start.

EASTON, Md., Aug. 2.—While many residents of Trappe, Talbot County, were fighting the forest fires around the plant of the Trappe Canning Company, one mile from the village last night, fire of supposed incendiary origin broke out in the town itself and caused damage that will probably reach $40,000.

All the business section of the village was practically destroyed, as well as several dwellings.

The forest fires gained headway while the residents were protecting their homes from the ravages of the flames in the town.

There is no water supply available for the fight in the woods. Men and boys, armed with brooms and blankets, are trying to smother the flames and protect the property of the tanners and farmers in the path of the blaze, but the fight is an unequal one, and large damage will result.

EDWIN LORD'S WILL IS SOUGHT IN VAIN

Sister in Maine Thinks Man Who Died in Republican Club Left Her His $950,000 Estate.

NO WILL, SHE GETS AN EIGHTH

One Friend Recalls Hearing Dyer Say He'd Left a Will and Another That He'd Trusteed His Property.

The will of Edwin Lord, the wealthy seventy-seven-year-old dyer, who died last March at the Republican Club in West Fortieth Street, where he had lived for three years, is being diligently sought by his relatives.

Mr. Lord, according to documents now in the possession of the State Controller, left an estate valued at $950,000. Some of this money is invested in New York City bonds and the remainder is in industrial stocks. Mr. Lord was one of the eleven children of a hard-working Maine farmer. He came to this city when he was sixteen. The fortune he subsequently amassed was entirely the result of his own exertions, and he had little communication with his ten brothers and sisters or with their children for almost a quarter of a century before his death.

Two sisters, Mrs. Susan A. Riatt and Mrs. Anna A. Sawyer, who live in Wiscasset, Me., are the only survivors of the eleven children. Both are more than 70 years old. Mrs. Sawyer, who is the widow of a Wiscasset lawyer, engaged Albert F. Hagar, a lawyer, of 60 Wall Street, to make a search for the will. Mr. Hagar had acted several times as attorney for the dead man. He knew that ex-United States Senator Spooner, Judge Miles Beach, James M. Ball, and other prominent attorneys also had attended to the dead man's legal business at different times. None of these lawyers remember ever having drawn up a will for Mr. Lord.

An old friend of Mr. Lord's, on the other hand, remembers distinctly that on the last Tuesday before the dyeing establishment proprietor's death Mr. Lord said to him:

"I have left a will."

Another business acquaintance remembers having heard Mr. Lord say:

"I have trusteed my property."

Mrs. Sawyer believes that her brother left the bulk of his fortune to her. If no will is found Mrs. Sawyer will have to share the estate with Mrs. Riatt and with the children of her other brothers and sisters. These children are scattered all over the country. One of Mr. Lord's nephews recently turned up in Rochester, N. Y., but where the others are Mrs. Sawyer does not know.

If the will is not found the estate will be divided into eight parts, of which Mrs. Sawyer and Mrs. Riatt will get one each. Miss Gladys Sloat, a great-niece, who lives in Maine, will get an eighth, and another share will be divided between Leslie and Anson Lord, children of Alfred Lord.

Four children of Mr. Lord's dead sister Sarah, whose addresses are not known, will share one-eighth, and another eighth will have to be reserved for the four children of Olive Lord, another dead sister. Another eighth will have to be reserved for George, Frank, and Milton Lord and Mrs. Abbie C. Wilson, the four children of another of Mr. Lord's dead brothers. Another sister is supposed to have left children, and the final share will be reserved for them.

"Mr. Lord was a man of unusual initiative," said Lawyer Hagar last night. "He was the son of a poor Maine farmer, and most of his brothers and sisters did not prosper particularly well. He himself left home at the age of sixteen, and, coming to the city, outaintd a thorough knowledge of the dyeing trade. He caved money and in time embarked in that business. At one time he had no less than eight dyeing establishments in different parts of this city. He became head of the Old Staten Island Dyeing Establishment when he was more than sixty, and later sold it out to its present owners, Barrett, Nephews & Co. As his prosperity increased he became a well-known figure in the clubs and hotels of the city.

"He lived at the Fifth Avenue Hotel for twenty-five years, and became the intimate friend of Conkling, Platt, Blaine, Harrison, and all the 'Old Guard.' Later he moved to the Waldorf, and spent the last few years of his life at the Republican Club."

The circumstances of Mr. Lord's death did not become known for several days after his death, and the details were never wholly explained.

"Mr. Lord was 77 years old, and suffered from varicose veins," Mr. Hagar said last night. "On the morning of March 10 last he went for a walk, and then, returning to his room at the Republican Club, prepared a bath of warm water. While he was bending over the tub he was seized with an attack of vertigo and fell unconscious into the tub. His foot struck the hot water faucet and turned it on. He was found lying unconscious and partly submerged in the water four hours later. His body was badly scalded. He was taken to a sanitarium, and died two days later. His death was not due to the actual scalding so much as to the shock."

Mr. Hagar is advertising for information which may lead to the discovery of the will. He is also searching all the safe deposit companies here and in Jersey City in the hope that Mr. Lord deposited his will there.

MORE DIAMONDS IMPORTED

And Fewer Automobiles from Abroad in July Compared to Last Year.

An official statement issued yesterday by Francis A. Bird, Appraiser of the Port, shows that the imports of diamonds and other precious stones for July exceeded the entries in the corresponding month one year ago by $1,000,000. The imports last month are set down officially as $4,475,936, compared with $3,626,116 in July, 1910.

Entries of foreign-built automobiles continue to show a falling off.

One hundred automobiles of the total appraised value of $290,713 were imported in July, 1911, in comparison with 163 cars, valued at $480,317 in July, 1910.

Five hundred and eighty-one cars, valued at $1,422,470, have been imported at this port since the first of January, 1911, compared with 780 cars, valued at $1,568,517, last year in the same period.

The value of merchandise of all kinds examined and appraised reached a total last month of $87,509,010, compared with $78,804,994 during July, 1910.

FIRE HOUSE BIDS REJECTED.

Commissioner Johnson to Readvertise the Specifications.

All the bids for the construction of the twenty-one fire houses to be built in different sections of the city were rejected yesterday by Fire Commissioner Johnson, and the whole undertaking must be readvertised.

The fact that would be done was predicted on Monday when the bids were opened and found to be far more scanty than the most pessimistic had expected. Five of the bidders were not even within sixty per cent. of the estimates, and out of twenty-one bids only five were considered at all reasonable. Commissioner Johnson believes that in this way dummy bidders will be warned off and the competition of the

HAITIAN REBELS WIN; SIMON NOW AN EXILE

Six Are Killed in a Riot as President Embarks—His Daughter Is Hurt.

FOREIGN INTERESTS SAFE

Committee of Safety Formed to Protect Capital, Which Is Invested—Several Warships Land Sailors.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Aug. 2.—The revolution in Haiti has triumphed. President Antoine Simon fled the capital to-day and took refuge on board the Haitian cruiser 17 Decembre, which formerly was the yacht American. With him are his wife and children and a number of his followers.

The 17 Decembre lies in the harbor to-night, and it is believed that Simon is awaiting the arrival of a foreign merchantman on which he can take passage for St. Thomas, Dutch West Indies, or Jamaica.

The capital is invested on all sides by the followers of Gen. Firmin, one of the revolutionary leaders. The city itself is in the hands of a committee of safety, and there is no general disorder. To-night numerous shots were heard, but these are believed to have been fired only in celebration of the overthrow of the Simon administration. Foreign interests are believed to be secure. Some of the foreign warships have landed bluejackets.

The departure of the aged President was not without disorder, however, for as he was embarking at the wharf on board the American schooner Bradford C. French there was a riotous demonstration, in which the ex-President's Chamberlain, Deputy Prin of Jeremie, and five other persons were killed, and Clementina Simon the ex-President's daughter, and six other persons were wounded. The injuries of Miss Simon are slight.

President Simon left the palace at 4 o'clock this afternoon after he had been informed that one wing of the revolutionary army, commanded by Gen. Peralte, had denied his request for three days in which to secure the safety of the city. This information was conveyed to Simon by the French and British Ministers, who went out yesterday to parley with Paralte and found him obdurate. The General informed them that owing to recent summary executions by Simon's order the President must leave the capital immediately, otherwise he would attack the city without further delay.

As Simon and his daughter gained the wharf there was a rush of the mob that had gathered to witness the departure. Miss Simon was the centre of the attack, and several woman, howling and shrieking, succeeded in pulling off her hat. Chief of Police Saint Lo rushed to the rescue and led the young woman away from the infuriated crowd toward the Bradford C. French. On the gangplank Deputy Prin also offered his arm to Miss Simon. He had scarcely done so when an enraged man rushed up, and, pressing the barrel of his rifle fairly into the Deputy's face, fired. Prin fell dead. Firing then became promiscuous, and before it ceased five other persons had been killed and six wounded.

When the Presidential party had boarded the schooner it ran out into the harbor and alongside the 17 Decembre, on which they took refuge. Among those with Simon, who will accompany him in exile, are Gen. Monplaisir, Minister of War, and Minister of the Interior Sylvain.

Antoine Simon assumed the Presidency of Haiti in December, 1908, after Nord Alexis was deposed, and on Dec. 17 was regularly elected Executive by Congress.

WATER FAMINE IN BALTIMORE

Streams Drying Up—Police Trying to Stop the Waste.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 2.—Acting on a report of Water Engineer Quick to the effect that, owing to the long-continued drought, the gravity of the water situation in this city is unprecedented, orders were issued to the police to stop all unnecessary use of water. Not only is there a steadily decreasing flow of the streams supplying Baltimore's great storage reservoirs, but wells are going dry all through Baltimore County and neighboring counties.

Coupled with the fear of a water famine is the muddy condition of the city water, which is due to the fact that the city is forced to use water as soon as it reaches the reservoirs and without waiting for the mud to settle.

The street railway company to-day assigned six of its sprinkler cars to different sections of the city to supply free of charge water furnished from springs in the suburbs. Several of the large breweries also are supplying free water from artesian wells to all who apply for it.

FIRE ENGINE BELLS TO GO.

Whistles to be Put on All Apparatus Within a Few Days.

Within a few days the old familiar sound of the fire bell sounding its warning that fire apparatus is on the way to a fire will be no more. This was made known yesterday by Commissioner Johnson, who outlined the new method of warning traffic.

Bells will be removed first from all automobile apparatus and whistles installed in their places will be used to sound a warning similar to that of the fire boats. The whistle on the fire boats is sounded with two short and one long blast. The land apparatus also will sound this warning.

As fast as pneumatic whistles will be installed on all of the land apparatus, and the Aldermen will pass a resolution prohibiting automobiles or vehicles from using this signal, Commissioner Johnson believes that in this way drivers can get used to the new warning, the operation of the

NEW REVOLUTION MENACES MEXICO

Jefes Threaten to Desert Madero if Vasquez Gomez Is Not Reinstated as Minister.

EIGHT KILLED IN A FIGHT

Armed Clash Between Liberals and Rurals—Revolutionary Party Split Into Factions.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 2.—The resignation of Emilio Vasques Gomez, Minister of the Interior, which had been discounted for weeks past and taken for granted by all political groups, now that it has occurred, has given rise to a grave situation, and to-night the city is being patrolled by numerous detachments of mounted police, while troops are under arms in their barracks, ready to quell any disturbance that may occur.

The revolutionary party is now split into two factions, the Maderistas and the Vasquistas, the latter being the followers of the deposed Minister, for the retirement of Vasques Gomez is rather a dismissal than a voluntary resignation. This is stated by Vasques Gomez himself in his note of resignation, in which he declares that he had been ordered by President de la Barra to resign, their views being irreconcilably divergent, for while de la Barra represented conservative tendencies, he (Vasques Gomez) had sought to carry into effect the more radical aspirations of the revolution.

Madero, who is still at Tehuacan, has to-night issued a manifesto in which he states that he fully approves the dismissal of Emilio Vasques Gomez. How far this will strain the relations between Madero and Francisco Vasques Gomez, brother of Emilio, who, it was supposed, was to be the Vice Presidential candidate, is not yet apparent.

But a group of Maderist leaders are strongly opposed to the retirement of Emilio Vasques Gomez, and after an interview this morning with President de la Barra, in which the latter displayed a firmness for which he had not been credited, these Jefes declared that they repudiated allegiance to Madero and the provisional Government, and unless the Minister were reinstated, they would start a new revolution. All claim to have considerable forces still under arms in their respective States. One of the dissenting leaders is Emiliano Zapata, a sanguinary chieftain of the State of Morelos.

This is the situation to-night, and the capital is a prey to intense excitement. Nevertheless the Government proposes to be fully prepared for emergencies, and the President in an interview says that he looks for no disturbance of public order.

Both Reyes and Madero published manifestoes to-night in which they state they will be rival candidates for the Presidency, but will use no other arms than those of legality and constitutionality.

Special to The New York Times.

JUAREZ, Mexico, Aug. 2.—Another pitched battle was fought on Monday afternoon at the Carrico ranch, located between this city and Guadalupe, reports of which reached here to-day. The fight was between rurales under the command of Castanedo and Alvares and a party of Liberals led by J. M. Rangel.

The engagement was in open country and lasted two hours. Seven Liberals were killed and three taken prisoners. A number, including Rangel, were wounded, some seriously, but all escaped. The rurales lost one killed and four wounded. After the fight the remaining Liberals fled. The rurales arrived in Juares early to-day with the three prisoners, two wounded.

Developments in the Juares situation, followin the seizure yesterday by the insurrectos of the Custom House, came rapidly to-day, when advices were received that a special train from the city of Chihuahua will arrive early to-morrow over the Mexican Central, bringing five hundred troops to reinforce the Juares garrison under the new military commandant to succeed Gen. Blanco.

RECORD LONG HEAT WAVE.

General Spring and Early Summer Temperature Highest in Forty Years.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Not in the past forty years have temperatures in the United States during the late Spring and early Summer been so uniformly high for so long a period and over such a large portion of the country as this year, according to Weather Bureau officials. The high temperatures were most pronounced over the more Central and Northern portions of the country, while the Southern States were comparatively exempt from unusual heat.

The intense heat occurring over the more populous sections caused great suffering in the congested portions of the cities and resulted in the loss of probably thousands of lives.

Lack of rainfall over the great agricultural districts during much of the long heated period greatly retarded vegetable growth and threatened a serious curtailment of crop production. Opportune rains, however, with cooler weather, greatly improved conditions, and the outlook at the present time is favorable for the gathering of the usual harvests of most of the great staples.

The period of greatest discomfort was from June 22 to July 10. Higher temperatures occurred at other periods over much of the territory, but the resulting discomfort and loss of human life were doubtless augmented in the period just passed by the fact that the most intense heat occurred toward the close of a long heated period when the animal vitality had been largely depleted and people were therefore not in condition to further withstand the debilitating effect of still greater heat. The nearest approach to the recent heat waves was in 1901.

MORE GERMAN HEAT VICTIMS.

Their Number Increases Despite Lower Temperature—To Be Hotter.

BERLIN, Aug. 2.—The temperature was slightly lower to-day, but the number of heat victims increases through the continued strain upon the sick and other people unable to resist the unusual condition. Many deaths are reported.

The Government offices in some States have been closed temporarily and navigation has been suspended at many points. Extensive forest and moor fires have broken out.

The official forecast is for still hotter weather.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The prolonged spell of hot weather has caused an ice famine. The demands of London and the provinces for ice cannot be satisfied until the arrival of cargoes which have been shipped from Norway.

Democratic Primaries Indicate a Lead of 15,000 for ex-Governor.

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 2.—It is conceded that former Gov. James K. Vardaman received a sufficient number of votes in yesterday's Democratic primaries to insure his election to the United States Senate.

Vardaman was ahead of the combined vote of C. H. Alexander and Senator Leroy Percy by 15,000 to-day, with indications that further returns would add to this lead.

Gonser, a first classman, appointed to the United States Military Academy from the Thirty-third New York Congressional District, was thrown from his horse in Highland Falls, near here, and sustained serious, if not fatal, injuries.

Gonser was hurried to the cadet hospital in an automobile by Capt. Jewet.

The child is said to be robust, and will be turned over to the Children's Aid Society, which now has care of the other four children of the convicted woman.

Mrs. Napolitano was sentenced to be hanged on next Wednesday by Justice Britton, at the Assises. Owing to the widespread interest which was manifested in her case, the sentence was commuted to life imprisonment, and as soon as she has recovered she will be taken to the Kingston Penitentiary.

Connecticut House Adopts Bill, Thus Promoting Public Officials.

HARTFORD, Aug. 2.—The Connecticut House of Representatives was unusually busy to-day, and more was accomplished than on any one day this session. Among the measures passed was an Optional Civil Service bill, which authorizes the adoption of the merit system. The bill has already passed the Senate, and provides that any political division of the State may adopt the measure at the next general election.

The bill provides means for selecting and promoting every public official and employe upon the sole basis of his proved ability to perform the duties of his office. The bill does not apply to elective offices.

CHICAGO GAS EIGHTY CENTS.

Price Fixed by Court Pending Result of Injunction Suit.

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—Judge Gibbons in the Circuit Court to-day fixed the price of gas in Chicago at 80 cents a thousand cubic feet, pending final disposition of an injunction suit brought by the People's Gas Light and Coke Company. The gas company sought to prevent the enforcement of an ordinance recently passed by the City Council reducing the price of gas from 85 cents to an average of 70 cents during the next five years.

The court deferred action on the issuance of an injunction. The court also refused to direct the gas company to impound in a special fund the amount collected from consumers on account of the 70 cents rate, pending the disposition over the suit.

SCHLEY GIVES LIGHT ON TENNESSEE DEAL

Contradicts Other Witnesses and Denies Sale to Steel Trust Was to Save His Firm.

NO SUCH THING MENTIONED

Reasons for Roosevelt's Intervention, He Says, Were Unknown to Him—Banks Were Not Pressing Him Over T. C. and I.

Grant B. Schley, testifying yesterday before the Stanley Congressional Committee, gave a different aspect to the sale of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company to the United States Steel Corporation than that put upon it by some of the financiers and steel men who had preceded him as the witness stand since the investigation began in Washington some weeks ago. He denied that he had represented to Judge Elbert H. Gary and Henry C. Frick that the sale was necessary in order to save the firm of Moore & Schley from failure and prevent a great and extensive financial disaster.

President Roosevelt's letter to the Attorney General, written soon after the visit of Messrs. Gary and Frick to the White House, was read by Congressman Martin W. Littleton, who conducted the examination, and Mr. Schley denied that he had represented the situation to Gary and Frick as therein set forth. He declared that the question of price was the only one he discussed with Gary and Frick, and that they had never told him that their purpose in making the deal was to save his firm from bankruptcy.

While confirming the fact that his firm was in a precarious condition at the time, his testimony throughout represented the transaction rather as an ordinary case of purchase and sale. He declared that Tennessee Coal and Iron stock was no more unpopular as collateral among the banks than other industrials, and that his only reason for negotiating the sale of that particular stock was that he was in a position to command a controlling interest, and that its sale afforded greater relief, inasmuch as he had a large amount of it in use, though no more than he had of American Tobacco stock.

On the other hand, Mr. Schley testified that he never had been able to find any confirmation of the theory that the Steel Corporation, J. P. Morgan & Co., or anybody else, had put any extra pressure on Tennessee stock in order to bring about its sale to the Steel Corporation.

Recovering from an Illness.

Mr. Schley has been ill for a long time, and his appearance showed it as he took his seat at the end of the long table in the little committee room adjoining the Aldermanic chamber in the City Hall, where the hearings are held.

Mr. Littleton took Mr. Schley back to the time in 1905 when he and his friends purchased a controlling interest in Tennessee Coal and Iron, and formed the syndicate which continued to hold it until it was sold to the Steel Corporation. He said a large interest was first offered to himself, L. C. Hanna, and C. A. Guthrie by George Kessler. These three interested the others, who subsequently formed the syndicate. With purchases made in the next day or two after the acquisition of Kessler's holdings the syndicate bought 11,500 shares out of the capital stock of 22,500 shares. Each member was to finance his own holdings and to keep possession of his stock.

"The whole matter was accomplished in two days," said Mr. Schley. "Mr. Kessler, Mr. Hanna, and Mr. Guthrie met at the Gotham Hotel and the deal was closed. We paid 110 for Kessler's stock."

"At what price was it then quoted on the Stock Exchange?" asked Mr. Littleton.

"In the 80s and 90s," was the answer.

Second Syndicate Organized.

It then developed that a little later a second syndicate was formed, which included some of the members of the first syndicate and about thirty new men. This had not been mentioned in the testimony of L. C. Hanna, Mr. Schley's associate as co-manager of the syndicate, and was apparently news to the committee. These questions by Mr. Littleton and answers by Mr. Schley followed:

Q.—What was the purpose of this second syndicate? A.—It was formed to purchase 50,000 additional shares of Tennessee stock.

Q.—How was this stock purchased: A.—On the street.

Q.—Through Moore & Schley as brokers? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did the members of this second syndicate take and pay for the stock or did they carry it on margin with your firm? A.—I wouldn't make that distinction. They took it and paid for it, but we loaned them money on it. They are two separate transactions, just as if they had taken the stock and borrowed on it somewhere else.

Q.—What did they pay for it? A.—I think it was 130. It may have been 120, but I think 130.

Q.—Were all the members of the first syndicate also members of the second? A.—No.

Q.—Were you a member? A.—No.

Q.—Or Mr. Kessler? A.—No.

Q.—Mr. Gates? A.—No.

Q.—Was Mr. Duke a member? A.—Yes, he was a member.

Q.—From whom was this stock purchased? A.—Partly from Mr. Kessler and partly from me. Kessler owned most of it, and I put in a small proportion to make up the 50,000 shares.

Q.—Was Kessler in distress at that time? A.—Yes, but not to such an extent that he was compelled to part with his stock.

Q.—Was a considerable portion of this stock left with Moore & Schley and rehypothecated by them? A.—Yes, about half of it.

Their Position Before the Sale.

Mr. Littleton inquired as to how much Tennessee stock Moore & Schley held as brokers during the period immediately preceding the sale to the Steel Corporation. Mr. Schley said the brokerage firm held from 140,000 to 150,000 shares, of which they had used 100,000 or 105,000 shares as collateral for their own loans from the banks. The amount, Mr. Schley explained, varied from day to day with the fluctuation of their loans and changes in the securities used as collateral. The banks would not accept any large amount or portion of Tennessee stock in the [illegible] collateral, partly because "Moore & Schley" name had been mixed up with it from time to time."

"Our regular method," said Mr. Schley, "was to put up collateral consisting of railroad stocks to the extent of 80 per cent. and industrial stocks for about 30 per cent. Sometimes we would divide it 60 and 40 and even 50 and 50, but as a rule it was 70 and 30. The Tennessee as part of the industrial collateral. We kept the collateral at about 20 per cent. above the amount of the loan. We kept track of this every day, and if the market price of any stock went down in the market, we required additional collateral to keep up the 20 per cent. margin."

Q.—Were any loans supported by Tennessee stock? A.—Yes, we did not accept as industrial stock to that extent.

Q.—It has been testified that [illegible] $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 in loans on Tennessee stock. Have you reached? A.—We had some $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 and the securities stock in the collateral [illegible] $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 of [illegible]

...& Co.? A.—About $1,000,000 to ... much from the First National ... Over $3,000,000. In all cases the ... varied from day to day.

Kessler's Financial Troubles.

Mr. Littleton wanted to know next about the stock Moore & Schley held that was not included in the syndicate stock. This had been referred to by other witnesses as "free stock."

"Kessler and I," said Mr. Schley, "had some of what you call 'free stock.' Kessler sent in 27,000 shares in excess of the amount needed to supply the syndicate allotments. Of this 10,000 was his own syndicate allotment and 17,000 was carried in his account."

Mr. Schley hastened to explain that he was not Mr. Kessler's broker in any other dealings.

Aside from the Tennessee Coal and Iron transactions," he said, "I never handled a share of stock for Kessler either before or after. At the time I thought he was a rich man, and he was. But his troubles grew thick and he didn't keep his agreements. He had eight or ten other accounts around the Street. These brokers were all distressed at the time and wanted him to take up his stock, which he wasn't able to do. I believe he had 25,000 to 30,000 shares with other brokers at one time. I had 25,000 shares in Tennessee, including the 10,000 shares of my syndicate allotment.

"I bought stock in the market when it was overpressed until I had 38,000 or 40,000 shares. Just before the panic Kessler owned 42,000 or 43,000 shares. In each case 14,000 shares represented our syndicate holdings at that time."

Mr. Schley said that the stock owned by himself and Kessler, with the stock owned by the syndicate, was within 40,000 or 50,000 shares of all the Tennessee outstanding.

Congressman Danforth got out a pencil and he and the witness went to figuring on the exact amount. This proved to be impossible, because of the two issues of additional stock after the syndicate was formed. Starting with the original 118,500 shares and adding the two increases of 10 per cent. each which was absorbed by the syndicate, was easy enough. The trouble was with the 50,000 shares taken by the second syndicate. Mr. Schley couldn't remember whether this purchase was made before or after either or both of the additional stock issues and consequently could not tell the amount by which it was increased by 15 per cent. subscriptions or whether it was increased at all. The result was that aside from whatever increase there may have been in this way the holdings were 205,716 shares out of atotal of 297,562.

Then Mr. Littleton undertook to find out from what quarter the pressure came for the elimination of Tennessee stock from Moore & Schley's collateral, to which has been attributed the necessity of selling it or exchanging it for Steel Corporation bonds.

Q.—What banks requested the elimination of Tennessee stock? A.—I can't answer that. Such requests would come to my cashier. I don't remember any specific instance.

Q.—Was there ever any such demand made by any bank? A.—Only in a general way. The same objection applied to other industrials. Republic Iron and Steel stock, for instance, was rejected among the collateral, though not to the same extent.

Q.—Was there any more demand that Tennessee Coal and Iron be withdrawn than other industrials? A.—No.

Q.—Did your cashier report that Tennessee Coal and Iron had suddenly become unacceptable? A.—Only to the same extent as other industrials.

Q.—Was there a general demand that Tennessee be taken out of existing loans and a refusal to accept it in new loans? A.—There was no difference between that stock and any other industrial stock.

Q.—Was there ever a refusal by any bank to accept Tennessee Coal and Iron or a demand that it be withdrawn? A.—I can't remember any specific instance.

Q.—At the time of the panic what caused the objection to it? A.—Chiefly its position marketwise. Some bankers wouldn't have anything to do with it.

Q.—Was there a general attack on Tennessee Coal and Iron or a general drive, as it has been called? A.—I never knew of any.

Mr. Schley was then questioned about his exchange of securities with Col. Oliver H. Payne in 1907, to which Lewis Cass Ledyard had testified. Mr. Schley said the matter was arranged by his sending up to Col. Payne a list of stocks that he had left with Moore & Schley, which Mr. Schley would like to use as collateral, and offering him other less marketable securities in exchange, which were to be returned later. These amountd to somewhere betwen $5,000,000 and $8,000,000, as definitely as Mr. Schley could remember. He had used, however, $6,000,000 or $6,000,000 and kept the rest in his box among stocks available for collateral which were kept on hand at all times in order to take care of loans.

As his last question before the recess Mr. Littleton asked:

"Was there ever a distinct withdrawal of T. C. I. and a distinct substitution of Col. Payne's stock as collateral for any loan?"

"I don't remember any" replied Mr. Schley.

After luncheon Mr. Littleton questioned Mr. Schley about conversations between himself and Mr. Hanna when the Cleveland man was in New York two or three weeks before the sale was made to the Steel Corporation.

Q.—Did Mr. Hanna offer you financial aid, and did you agree with him that the panic would be weathered? A.—I don't remember either of those things.

Q.—Didn't Mr. Hanna bring his strong box with him and say: "Here are my securities and they are at the service of Moore & Schley to protect Tennessee Coal and Iron?" A.—No.

Mr. Littleton read from Mr. Schley's testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee statements that there was a general attack on his firm in Wall Street. The witness explained that there were many rumors going around about it which were damaging although unfounded. Stories were put out that the firm was going to fail, when it had plenty of assets to meet its obligations.

Q.—Then Moore & Schley were not attacked solely because of their ownership of T. C. I.? A.—No.

Q.—If there was no drive against T. C. & I. and the rumors regarding Moore & Schley were groundless, in what way was the exchange of the stock for Steel bonds necessary to save Moore & Schley from failure? A.—We had $35,000,000 in loans, our customers were borrowing from us on T. C. & I., which was unmarketable. When we got the bonds in exchange there was an immediate market for them. The bonds could be sold and the accounts cleared.

Q.—You didn't call the loans of your customers secured by T. C. & I.? A.—Only in some cases we tried to get them to take up the stock. Some of them couldn't.

Q.—Did it ever go to the point of forfeiture of the stock to you? A.—No.

Q.—Why was it any more necessary to exchange the T. C. & I. stock than that of the Republic Iron and Steel Company, or any of the others which were not readily salable? A.—It wasn't.

Q.—You had just as much reason for trying to negotiate a sale of the other stocks as the T. C. & I.? A.—Yes; except that we had a very much larger amount of T. C. & I.

Q.—Was there any particular reason why the T. C. & I. should be made the subject of a trade between you and the Steel Corporation? A.—It relieved my needs. It relieved every friend I had and relieved my office.

Q.—Suppose the Steel Corporation had refused you the bonds. Would that have served the same purpose? A.—No, because my friends couldn't have availed themselves of borrowed bonds. They couldn't have sold them.

Couldn't Secure Offered Loan.

Mr. Littleton continued to press this point because it had been testified by other witnesses that the Steel Corporation had been willing to advance cash to relieve Moore & Schley of their difficulties and preferred to do so rather than buy the Tennessee property.

Q.—Wouldn't it have served the same purpose if they had loaned you the same amount of bonds, $35,000,000? A.—Ledyard knew that they would lend $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 on certain collateral, but I couldn't put it through, and told Ledyard it was no use to me.

Q.—Well, if they had made the loan? Without the collateral? Just a bald loan?

A.—Yes. A.—I would hardly have exhibited as much cheek as to ask that.

Q.—Never mind that. You testified before the Senate committee that if you had $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 in cash you would have been happy enough? A.—Yes, and offered such a loan without interest.

Mr. Littleton then took up the inception of a plan to sell to the Steel Corporation. The committee learned from Lewis Cass Ledyard last week that Col. Oliver H. Payne had asked him to see Mr. Morgan. Mr. Schley was asked what was the idea of the sale.

"Ledyard talked to me about it," replied Mr. Schley. "He said 'Life insurance companies are worried like this. Why don't you let the Steel Corporation [illegible] to whom it should be sold. SUBWAY DIGGING NOT REALLY BEGUN

The Hole Willcox Made with a Silver Spade Has Not Been Enlarged.

WAITING ON THE CONTRACTOR

He Must File Plans as to Methods of Work—Attack on Subway Sections of New Charter.

The foot-square, two-inch-deep hole which Chairman Willcox of the Public Service Commission dug at the southeast corner of Lexington Avenue and Sixty-seventh Street last Monday with a silver spade to symbolize the starting of the tunneling of the new Lexington Avenue Subway is furnishing residents of the locality with much amusement, and curiosity seekers, who come to the spot from distant parts of the city to see the subway diggers work, with considerable disappointment and surprise.

Citizens had gained the impression that Chairman Willcox's use of the spade would be followed by the advent of an army of laborers, so they visited the corner on Tuesday and yesterday to see how the work was going on. They found, however, the very same hole Chairman Willcox had dug. No pickaxes are wielded anywhere near it, and not a single laborer is in sight.

"I never was so surprised in my life," said one elderly, spectacled man with what looked like a number of recently purchased second-hand books under his arm as he walked disappointedly away from the alleged excavation yesterday. "I have followed the subway situation most painstakingly for many years. I feel that the city's overtaxed transit facilities require that there shouldn't be a day's delay. I came all the way over from Brooklyn to see how the work of building the subway was getting on, picturing all the way over what a scene of activity I was soon to survey. When I got to the corner there wasn't a soul in sight. Looking closely at the asphalt in the street, I saw that a small square had apparently recently been cut in it. It was just the same kind of a hole which paving contractors cut when a section of asphalt has become worn out and is going to be replaced. It was full of dust and chips. Pretty soon a wagon came along and the hole was so insignificant that the wagon drove right over it, the driver not even troubling to turn aside."

After talking to the new subway's disappointed visitor, a TIMES reporter visited the alleged excavation at Sixty-seventh Street himself, and found that it was very much as the visitor had described. While the reporter watched, a cart passed over the square, hollowed-out section, its wheels jouncing into the two-inch hole and then out again without mishap.

"Look out; you'll fall into the subway!" yelled an urchin.

"Is that it?" the driver called in a contemptuous tone.

Waiting for Contractor's Plans.

According to the Public Service Commission, the actual digging of the subway will not commence for the next few days, probably about Monday. The reason for this is that the Bradley Company, which is to do the digging, has not yet filed its plans with the engineer of the Public Service Commission. These plans may be filed to-day and will be immediately approved.

Alfred Craven, Acting Chief Engineer of the commission, had this to say about the delay yesterday:

"In reference to the commencement of actual construction work on the sections of the Lexington Avenue route recently let to the Bradley Contracting Company, and in answer to the many questions as to when work will really commence, I desire to say that under the ordinary procedure, and as provided in the contract, Bradley has sixty days from July 21—the day of signing his contract—within which to commence work. This is the period allotted to the contractor to get together his plant, to erect his working platforms, and do other preliminaries in order to proceed with the work in an orderly manner.

"Owing to the fact, however, that Bradley is particularly well equipped for subway construction, he will be able to actually commence work in a much shorter period than the above, and together we are now engaged in selecting the best points of vantage for working and in providing plans for his working plant; that will not only be best for the long period that will be necessary to complete the work, but these plans and working points will be so arranged that they will cause the least inconvenience to the public and to the property owners that may be more or less affected by the work.

"It must be borne in mind that this work is to be done under a contract binding on both parties thereto. Section No. 24 of the specifications provides:

Section No. 24. Plans showing the proposed location and proposed methods of construction of shafts, dumping platforms, &c., shall be submitted to the Engineer and receive his aproval before permits will be granted for such plant and appliances to be constructed and put in operation.

"I am expecting within a few days, maybe to-morrow, to be able to approve plans, as above noted, and Bradley can then go ahead with his construction. The number of working points will then be increased as fast as possible and as is consistent with orderly procedure on such a great work; a work that involves so great a responsibility, not only on the contractor, but on those with whom will rest the responsibility of seeing that whatever is done is properly done and the inconvenience to traffic and to the people along the route will be reduced to a minimum."

The Bradley Contracting Company has not made it known where it intends to establish shafts. In some portions, where the subway is to be double-decked, it is likely that the two lower tracks, to be used for express service, will be constructed by regular tunneling, particularly where it will be through rock. Even for the building of the local tracks shafts will be necessary, as future subways are not to be constructed on the open-cut plan, but with the cut and cover method as is being done on the Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn, route. Under this system it will be necessary to maintain openings at frequent intervals.

It was denied that the delay in starting work was due to the fact that argument on the order to show cause why an injunction should not be issued to stop the work, as asked by attorneys of the Admiral Realty Company, will be made before Justice Brady in the Supreme Court to-day. It was said on behalf of the Public Service Commission that its officials are not taking the suit seriously. They do not believe that Justice Brady will grant the injunction.

The Board of Estimate will take up the extension of Irving Place in connection with new subways at its meeting to-day. Three short blocks of Irving Place, 75 feet wide, are needed to permit of the construction of the Triborough Subway. President McAneny has already recommended that provision be made for assessing the entire cost of the proceedings upon a local area of benefit and upon the three boroughs. It is estimated that the probable expense involved will be about $2,000,000. At the same meeting the board will act upon the Fifty-ninth Street rapid transit route across Queensboro Bridge, which is a connection of the Broadway line of the B. R. T. The Mayor has the power to disapprove this branch, and it is expected that he will do so.

Controller Prendergast said yesterday that at to-day's meeting of the board he would not report in favor of letting the contract for Section 3 of the Lexington Avenue route, extending from Fourteenth Street to Sixty-sixth Street. This is one of the most important links in the B. R. T. system, but the Controller said he wanted more time to consider it. The Controller, however, will report favorably on Section 4, which extends from 106th to 118th Street. This contract has been approved by the Public Service Commission.

The Citizens' Union, which has been instrumental in the proposed new city charter, came out yesterday a statement that if the charter goes through it will allow the whole subway situation to [illegible]

[illegible] streets to [illegible] route. This vital provision, it says, is hidden in the title, "Rapid Transit Act Not to Be Affected."

The statement says in part:

"The new charter proposes to put into the Mayor's hands a control of the subway situation which will be in all essential respects equal to that of the entire Board of Estimate, so that if he does not agree with the board there must be a dead-lock. The new charter, if enacted, gives Mayor Gaynor the power which he does not now possess of undoing the recent action of the Board of Estimate by vetoing every contract for subway operation which is not actually approved in its final form prior to the enactment of the new charter."

Willcox Goes Away Hopefully.

Chairman Willcox of the Public Service Commissioner, former Controller Herman A. Metz, J. Sergeant Cram, and Robert Adamson, secretary to Mayor Gaynor, all sailed on the Mauretania for Europe yesterday. Both Mr. Willcox and Mr. Metz talked subways.

The former said he was pleased with the beginning of the work on the Lexington Avenue line, and added that it all depended now on the action of the Board of Estimate whether or not New York had as many subways as it needed.

"This talk about new subways is all a fake," said Mr. Metz. "You can spell that word out, f-a-k-e, so as to make no mistake. The Interborough is the only party that knows anything about building subways."

RAZE OLD CHELSEA HOUSES.

One of Three Held a Famous Bakery Half a Century Ago.

Residents of the lower Chelsea section watched with interest yesterday the razing of three wooden houses in Eighth Avenue. One is a three-story, archaic structure, on the northwest corner of Seventeenth Street, another and cheaper looking building is on the northeast, while the third, on the southeast corner of Eighteenth Street, is a three-story frame house which was the home of people of wealth more than half a century ago.

These are the only frame buildings left in this Eighth Avenue block, and their simultaneous demolition has led old residents to believe that a business revival has struck their quiet section.

Changes come slowly to the lower part of Eighth Avenue, and it has been many years since so many structures have been removed to make way for modern improvements. Frederick A. Loase has kept a stationery store in the first-named house for more than fifteen years and the little shop adjoining his in the same building has been a jewelry store for more than forty. In the jewelry store is a big, old-fashioned fireplace, showing that the wooden house was built for comfort. One old timer said the house was close to one hundred years old, but the owner, Mrs. Catherine D. Coffey, who intends to erect a six-story flat on the site, says it cannot be more than seventy-five years old.

Back in the fifties this house was famous in Chelsea Village as Howe's bakery. Older residents remember how, when children, they bought hot-cross buns during the Easter season at Howe's bakery. These buns made the shop famous, but when the proprietor, John W. Howe, died, several years ago, the bakery was abandoned.

A story is told by one old timer that many of Howe's customers regarded the place with awe about forty years ago because of the mysterious disappearance of one of the bakers. A woman died in the neighborhood, and rumor said it was due to eating cakes she bought at the bakery. This so preyed on the mind of one of the dough mixers that he became insane and then disappeared.

"He was never heard from again, and it used to be said that his ghost haunted the old bakery," said the old timer.

Both of the other wooden houses have been saloons in recent years.

WIRELESS DECISION TO-DAY

Expected on the Appeal of Wilson and Others from Conviction.

It is expected that the United States Circuit Court of Appeals will render its decision to-day on the appeals of Col. Christopher Columbus Wilson, President of the United Wireless Telegraph Company; Francis X. Butler, counsel and a Director in the same corporation, and William W. Tompkins, head of the New York selling agency which disposed of United Wireless stock to investors. The trio, who are in the Tombs, were convicted of using the mails to defraud investors, and were sentenced to terms of imprisonment at Atlanta and on Blackwells Island.

W. Bourke Cockran, John B. Stanchfield, and Arthur M. King made the arguments for the defendants.

The Circuit Court of Appeals may also dispose of the appeals of Charles R. Heike, former Secretary and Treasurer of the American Sugar Refining Company, and Ernest W. Garbracht, former Superintendent of the Havermeyer & Elder sugar refineries at Williamsburg, who were convicted in June, 1910, of being concerned in a conspiracy to defraud the Government out of full duty through the false weighing of imported raw sugar. They were sentenced to terms of imprisonment, but the men have never been locked up. The appeals were heard in June last.

JEWELER FOILS TWO THIEVES.

Chases Them from His Store When They Threaten Him with a Pistol.

Joseph Eagle was sitting in his little jewelry store at 548 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, when two young men, rather shabby and unkempt, pushed open the door and walked up to the counter. Would Eagle fix the mainspring of his watch, one of the men asked, holding out a stained, cheap timepiece. Eagle bent over to examine it, and as he did so the other man pointed something at him.

Eagle backed away. There was the click of a trigger. Nothing came of it. Eagle darted to the rear of his shop and pounded on the wall as a signal of trouble to his neighbor, an optician. Then he ran out in time to see the men vanish into the street. Around the corner to De Kalb Avenue he chased them, but no further, for it suddenly occurred to him that this might be a ruse to get him out of his store.

The chase was taken up by a score of persons, and one actually collared one of the fugitives, but he lost him again, and the two, separating, made their escape. It was suggested yesterday that the men had hoped to frighten Eagle with the pistol, by merely leveling it at him, but that the slip of a finger on the trigger revealed that it was unloaded. The police strongly suspect the weapon was only a cap pistol.

$40 DAMAGE BY $7 MULE.

Neighbors Sore When They Saw Esau Smash Their Porcelain.

Esau, a seven-dollar mule from Oklahoma, warranted tame and peaceful, did more than $40 damage yesterday afternoon in less time than it takes to write it. And now there is a coolness between the family of George Keim, who owns the mule, of 21 First Street, and that of Fritz Eselius, his next door neighbor.

Keim bought Esau at an auction two weeks ago, and, taking him home, put him in the stable back of his house, where he gave demonstrations of back heel lifting. Yesterday Esau was let loose by one of Keim's boys, and, making the most of his liberty, he burst into the kitchen of the next house, where the Eselius family was eating dinner.

The results were almost too painful to relate in detail, but they included the demolition of the Eselius porcelain, except two teacups. Not much is left of the stove, either. Having accomplished this, Esau attempted to make his exit by the window, and broke finely, pushing his way out. He was retrieved with difficulty [illegible]

PRISON LIFE DRIVES SINCLAIR TO POETRY

Serving 18 Hours at Hard Labor, Author Works in the Shadow of the Gallows.

WHIPPING POST ALSO NEAR

Single Taxer Now Purposes to Enforce Blue Laws Against Judges Who Play Golf.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 2.—The clash of Upton Sinclair and nine of his companion dwellers in the single tax colony at Arden with the old Delaware blue laws was ended temporarily at 8 o'clock this afternoon, when Sinclair and the nine others marched out of the Newcastle County Workhouse, after serving sentences of eighteen hours at hard labor for playing tennis on Sunday, in the case of nine of the prisoners, and for selling ice cream on Sunday in the case of the tenth.

All the prisoners agreed as they left the prison that their tilt with the blue laws was by no means concluded, and that they will give the old statutes such advertising before they are through that Delaware will be very much ashamed before her sister States to confess that they are on the statute books.

Incidentally, they vowed that there would never be another moment's peace in the village of Arden for the complainant in the case, George Brown, a philosophical Anarchist, who invoked the blue laws against his companions because they would not let him discuss race suicide in their open forums when women of the colony were present.

Sinclair denounced Brown this afternoon as a man who was no single taxer and had no business in the colony. He said that with his anarchistic ideas he came there merely because the living conditions were pleasant under the very mild requirements of the ninety-nine-year lease, without interest, enjoyed through the bounty of the millionaire single taxer, Joseph Fels.

Longed for a Bath.

Through the eighteen hours that he remained in durance vile, the dominating thought of the mind of Sinclair was to obtain a shower bath and to eat a dish of ice cream. The shower bath he obtained at the conclusion of his term on the rock pile, which Warden Crawford of the prison kindly made one hour shorter than the term required of ordinary prisoners. The ice cream he secured an hour later, after he had taken a trolley into Wilmington.

It was the first food he had eaten since being ordered to prison for refusal to pay the $4 fine exacted of him by Squire Robertson. Sinclair, refreshed by the ice cream, stated his impressions of prison life in terms that reeked of villainies equal to any described in his "Jungle." He did not touch water in the prison for fear of the drinking cups. He could not eat the food because starch was the dominating ingredient, and there were no fresh vegetables. He could not sleep on the couch in his cell, because he feared the blanket.

What he thought of it all, especially of the creatures whom he felt confident shared his cell with him, he set down in a poem written surreptitiously while he labored with hammer and chisel on the stones.

There were 837 prisoners in jail besides the Sinclair party, but the strict law of silence enjoined upon them at all times made it impossible for Sinclair to speak to any of them.

Once a man poked his fist through the boards in the stockade where Sinclair was breaking stone. He called out, "Here, Upton, I've come to tell you I'm with you; I'm Mayor Alex Ervin of Arden, and all the people are with you."

Threatened with Gun.

But a guard with a shotgun spied the visitor from without, and leveling the gun at him told him to retreat quickly or take the consequences. Mayor Ervin retreated. Warden Crawford caught sight of him and had him taken into the main office, where he was kept until the party had served its time. All other visitors to the prison were similarly kept under observation.

About fifty of Sinclair's fellow-prisoners were negroes. He found that not all of them worked on the stone pile, which he thought was an invigorating place to work, but that many were kept in a dismal sweatshop conducted by a firm of New York clothing merchants under the most villainous sweatshop conditions.

In the courtyard, through which he was led in prison garb from his cell to the rock pile, inclosed in a stockade some distance from the main prison, Sinclair found certain instruments of torture that impressed him as very fitting accompaniments of the blue laws under which he was jailed.

The Whipping Post.

These instruments consisted of one whipping post, one set of stocks, and a partially dismantled gallows which could be set up on a moment's notice. The whipping post was used only a short time ago, Sinclair learned, and the gallows was used for the execution of a negro last year. The stocks, however, were merely a relic of former days, the Jail Warden insisted.

"And this is our America!" Sinclair said, in a fine frenzy of resentment. "A sweatshop in prison, a whipping post there, consisting of two iron rings to hold a man while his back is blistered with stripes, and the stocks from which Delaware has hardly graduated. I never knew about the old blue laws, but if I am to go to prison because I play tennis on Sunday I want all the others that play tennis on Sunday to be jailed. I want the Judges in this county who play golf and the Prosecuting Attorney, who plays golf, to feel the blue laws' keen edge.

"In that prison you could easily tell who worked on the stone pile and who worked in the sweatshop. The latter were pale and ill, and there were boils on their wrists from the unfit food. When a prisoner has come down with tuberculosis it seems they shift him to the stone pile, and they hope it will cure him; they don't seem to understand why it doesn't.

"Luckily I did not have to don my uniform until this morning. We were crowded and I had to double up with another man. I gave him all the bed willingly and all the blankets. I slept on a hard cement floor with nothing under me, and slept for perhaps thirty minutes in the entire night.

Hard Work and Poor Food.

"This morning I found I could not lean upon the table at breakfast with my elbows or speak to any other prisoner. For breakfast there was bread and molasses and oatmeal, all starchy foods. Then I was marched away to the stone pile. My job was to fill a barrow with stones and wheel it to another place. When the guard wasn't looking I wrote my poem out on a bit of paper I had stolen from the Warden's office, using a pencil I had obtained in the same manner from his desk. I had worked the poem out in the night, and when I saw pencil and paper [illegible]

Look them for fear I should forget it before I was free.

"At first that there was a bit of dreary pleasure swimming in stronger waters, but a bit of meat as one would feed to his dog, or vegetables for my constitution, and was told they had been when the prison garden produced them. This is gardening season, yet there were no vegetables. The cells were steel boxes wholly unventilated. As a sanitary proposition they were horrible. The windows were 50, maybe 100, feet away. And every man going from his cell in the morning has to pass a cat-o'-nine-tails hanging on the corridor wall, along with the whipping post and the stocks and the gallows."

The poem that Mr. Sinclair composed and wrote down on the stone pile is this:

THE MENAGERIE.

Oh, come ye lords and ladies of the realm,
Come from your couches soft, your perfumed halls,
Come watch with me throughout the weary hours.
Here are there sounds to fill your jaded nerves,
Such as the cave men, your forefathers, heard,
Crouching in forest of primeval night.
Here tier on tier in steel-barred cages pent
The beasts ye breed and hunt throughout the land.
Hark to that snore—some beast that slumbers deep.
Hark to that roar—some beast that dreams of blood.
Hark to that moan—some beast that wakes and weeps.
And now in sudden stillness mark the sound—
Some beast that rasps his vermin-haunted hide.
Oh, come ye lords and ladies of the realm.
Come keep the watch with me. The show is yours.
Behold the source of all our joy and pride,
These beasts ye harness fast and set to draw
The chariots of your pageantry and pomp.
It is their blood ye shed to make your feasts.
It is their treadmill that moves all your world.
Come sit and think how it will be with you
When God shall send His flaming angel down
And break these bars. So hath He done of yore,
So doeth He to lords and ladies grand,
Who feed upon the blood of other men—
And there these beasts raven in your streets.

Instead of returning direct to Arden after gaining his freedom Sinclair visited lawyers in Wilmington. His plan is to start immediately widespread blue law prosecutions.

Fred Steinline, the prisoner convicted of selling ice cream on Sunday, counted himself more lucky than the rest. His fine was $8 instead of $4 and costs, but he was allowed double rates for his stone pile services and came out after eighteen hours with the rest.

Prof. Joseph Garrad of the Manual Training School of Philadelphia, who was Sinclair's opponent in the tennis game, dissented from Sinclair as to the food. He said it was fine and wholesome, and that he thoroughly enjoyed it.

TO TRY GEIDEL ON AUG. 21.

Judge Crain Sets Date Over Protest of Youthful Slayer's Counsel.

Judge T. C. T. Crain in General Sessions yesterday set Aug. 21 as the date for the trial of Paul Geidel, the bellboy under indictment for the murder of William H. Jackson in the Hotel Iroquois.

Assistant District Attorney Charles Nott suggested the date. Geidel's counsel, James A. Gray, opposed the motion, saying that he thought an early trial would make it impossible for him to get a jury which would not be prejudiced against his client and on the further ground that it might be necessary to inquire into Geidel's mental condition at the time of the murder.

James C. Cleary, also of counsel for the defense, said that there were five detectives working on the case for the defense, and added:

"We will prove that two persons besides Jackson were in the room when Jackson was killed. One of these was Geidel we will admit, but there was no murder committed."

Mr. Cleary also said that some startling revelations would be made, but refused to say what the nature of the revelations would be.

Late in the afternoon the Grand Jury handed up to Judge Crain an indictment charging Patrick Grane, the roommate of Geidel, with criminally receiving stolen property. The indictment is based on his own confession that he had pawned the gold watch belonging to the murdered man, McGrane will be the principal witness for the prosecution.

Mr. Jackson's will was filed yesterday. The petition states that the total value of his estate, real and personal, is not over $2,500. The estate is left to his two brothers, Frederick W. Jackson and Frank W. Jackson, who are named as executors. Frederick W. Jackson died in June, 1906.

ARMY CHIEFS AT ODDS.

Gen. Wood Wants Short Enlistments and Ainsworth Long Ones.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—The controversy between Major Gen. Leonard Wood, Chief of Staff of the Army, and Major Gen. F. S. Ainsworth, Adjutant General of the army, over the length of the period of enlistment is gathering volume, and promises to break out with great fury when Congress meets next Winter.

James Hay, Chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, is sending out this week a general letter to all officers in the army who have had company commands, asking several questions, which the recipients are requested to answer. The replies that have come thus far are few, but it is known that a very large number of officers would like to reply if they felt they could do so and not violate army regulations or the executive order of Dec. 4, 1909, which forbids any Government employe or official or officer giving information to a member of Congress or a committee of Congress which should properly come through a department head.

The issue is between the short period of enlistment advocated by Gen. Wood and the longer one urged by Gen. Ainsworth. The former stands for the idea of turning trained soldiers back into private life and taking in new men to be trained, a record being kept of the whereabouts of the old soldiers, so that in case of war they may be called into the service promptly. He is in favor of paying such reserves a stated sum annually for reporting regularly to the War Department.

Gen. Ainsworth wants the period of enlistment increased to five years.

REPAIRING QUEENS ROADS.

Quarrymen Brought from Maine to Save the Old Stone Blocks.

Twenty-two quarrymen from Maine have been employed by contractors to repair highways in Queens. Sections of Jackson and other avenues in Long Island City are being repaved with concrete or asphalt block and the men are to split in two the old granite paving blocks which are being used as a foundation.

Much skill is required to split a granite block so that the top surface will be smooth. The roadway between trolley tracks is being concreted, old granite paving blocks being crushed and used for concreting material.

It is said that Mr. Stevens will assume the management of the road immediately following his return from Europe.

SHOT AT LONG BEACH WHEN LIGHTS GO OUT

Woman Wounded Near the Heart by Husband on Nassau Hotel Lawn.

WOULDN'T TAKE HIM BACK

Accident to Electric Lighting Set Him Free and He Sought Her with Revolver at Concert—Beach Search for Him.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BEACH, L. I., Aug. 2.—Something went wrong with the electric light service here to-night, just when the band concert was in progress on the lawn some fifty yards from the Nassau Hotel. Lights on the Boardwalk and in most other places suddenly became dim and then went out, and as the band was compelled to stop playing, the crowd started back to the boardwalk.

Suddenly there was the report of a revolver shot from the lawn which the crowd had just left. Half a dozen men ran back through the darkness. Guided by a woman's cry they came on Mrs. Grimshaw, cashier in the restaurant at the Nassau, lying on the ground, shot beneath the heart. She was still conscious, and to the first man who reached her, gasped:

"Jimmy did it—my husband."

Mrs. Grimshaw was carried to the hotel, where Dr. Madox and Dr. Bierworth worked over her while a telephone summons for an ambulance was sent to the Nassau County Hospital in Mineola. Mrs. Grimshaw, though badly hurt, did not lose her senses. While she awaited the ambulance, she told of the shooting.

She said that her husband, from whom she has been separated for four or five years, has bothered her frequently of late. She refused to return and live with him. Grimshaw has been employed in a moving picture show on the Boardwalk, and has sought many interviews with his wife. Last night the trouble with the lights set him free from his work shortly before 11 o'clock and he hurried up to the concert, arriving just as the lights went out there.

By their last gleams he sighted his wife, and going to her began to plead once more that she return to him. She refused again and again, said Mrs. Grimshaw, and it was then that her husband drew his revolver in the darkness and shot her.

When help reached her the man had made off, and as none could see more than a few feet he escaped detection. There are only two roads by which the mainland can be reached from the beach—one is the railroad and the other a carriage and automobile road. Within fifteen minutes after the shooting policemen were on guard at both these roads, and it is not believed that Grimshaw has been able to leave the island. Meantime a search is being made for him, and it is expected that he will be caught before daybreak.

Mrs. Grimshaw was hurried to the hospital in the ambulance, and it was said that despite the nearness of the wound to her heart she seemed to have a good chance to live.

WANT SMITH IN SENATE.

Free List Bill Vote Brings Move to Get Georgia Governor In Seat.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 2.—Inspired by yesterday's defeat of the original Farmers' Free List bill, through the lack of one vote, State Senator W. J. Harris to-day introduced into the Legislature a resolution asking Gov. Hoke Smith, United States Senator-elect, to go to Washington and assume his duties as a member of the Upper Branch of Congress. Upon the objection of several Senators the resolution was laid on the table for one day.

A similar resolution was introduced into the Georgia House several days ago, but it never reached a vote. Gov. Smith has declared he would not relinquish the Governorship until after the present session of the Assembly.

JAMAICA BAY FERRIES.

City Approves Leases for Two Lines from Rockaway Beach.

The Sinking Fund Commission approved yesterday the establishment of a ferry to Canarsie Landing, Rockaway Beach, from Bergen Beach, and a lease of the franchise to Frederick Boegle for a term of five years at an annual rental of 5 per cent. of the gross receipts, but not less than $100 a year. The fare is to be 10 cents each way, and the ferry will operate in the Summer season only between 2 P. M. and 11 P. M.

The commission also approved the lease to Arthur McAvoy of the franchise for a ferry from the foot of Rockaway Landing, Canarsie, to Roxbury Hotel Landing, at Rockaway Point, Barren Island, for a term of five years from Feb. 1, 1911, at terms similar to those granted Mr. Boegle.

MAYOR VISITS THE PARKS

With Commissioner Stover, Who Won't Discuss His Rumored Resignation.

Mayor Gaynor accompanied Park Commissioner Stover and Alexander H. Spencer, Chairman of the City Club's Committee on Parks, on a tour of inspection of the parks in Manhattan yesterday afternoon. The inspection followed a visit which the Park Commissioner paid the Mayor at the City Hall.

"Are you going to resign?" Commissioner Stover was asked when he came from the Mayor's office.

"Why should I?" he asked.

"Have you already resigned?"

"Why should I resign any more than any of the Mayor's other Commissioners?" Mr. Stover again asked.

When informed that there had been many rumors of his resignation he replied that he had not paid any attention to them, as he had been attacked ever since he had been in office.

"Has the Mayor asked you to resign?" persisted Mr. Stover's questioner.

"Why should he? But I don't want to talk about the Mayor, anyway," was the non-committal answer.

When the Mayor returned from his trip of inspection he had nothing to say regarding the Park Commissioner.

GOOD POSTAL BANK BUSINESS

Postmaster Morgan Expects to Establish Six More Banks in the City.

Business at the Postal Savings Bank went on yesterday in the placid manner of the old established financial institutions.

Postmaster Morgan had deposits accepted at two windows instead of the single one used on the opening day, when deposits aggregating $3,775 were accepted.

It is impossible to ascertain just yet how many cards and postal bank stamps were sold. The cards which have spaces for nine stamps cost ten cents apiece. When the cards are filled up they will be accepted for the opening of one dollar accounts at the postal bank in the Money Order Division under Supt. Joseph Elliott on the second floor of the General Post Office Building.

Postmaster Morgan expects to open postal banks in at least six Branch Post Office stations, two in the Bronx, two on the east side, and two on the west side of Manhattan.

He was identified through letters and papers in one of his clothes, which he left in the bathhouse corresponding to the one he was given at the [illegible]

SAYS MAILS SHELTER FRAUD.

Speaker at Advertising Convention Criticises Government.

BOSTON, Aug. 2.—An old-fashioned watermelon cutting was enjoyed to-night by the 3,000 delegates to the seventh annual convention of Associated Advertising Clubs of America. The feast was held at the Victoria Hotel, and was under the direction of the Atlanta "Ad" Men's Club. There were more than a thousand of the largest, sweetest, and juciest "rattlesnake" Georgia watermelons harvested this year. Fred Houser, Secretary-Treasurer of the Georgia organization, in the garb of an old Southern darky, showed the uninitiated how to divide a melon into "Georgia" wedges, while a "darky" quartet sang familiar Southern melodies.

Eleven different sessions of the convention departments were held to-day and advertising in all its phases was discussed. "Ad." writers told how copy should be written and also how it should not be written. Lafayette Young, Jr., of Des Moines was Chairman of the daily newspaper convention, and among the speakers were William C. Freeman and Thomas E. Dockrell, both of New York.

Frank Presbrey of New York presided at the meeting of General Advertisers, the principal address being by John Lee Mahin of Chicago.

One of the handicaps imposed on honest publishers, according to Herbert S. Houston of New York, who spoke on "Financial Advertising for Magazines from the Publisher's Point of View," is unfair competition with the Government, which, he declared, not only permitted but protected under its postage stamp a great volume of "get-rich-quick" fraudulent advertising. He made the point that this advertising had been driven from the columns of all reputable newspapers and periodicals, and now sought refuge under the protecting arm of the Government.

POLICEMAN FAINTS ON POST.

Hailed as a Victim of Waldo's New System—Doctors Not So Sure.

Patrolman Thomas McSherry of the Butler Street Police Station was found by two bakers returning from work just before daybreak yesterday lying in the middle of the street at Hoyt and Pacific Streets unconscious. Much frightened they hurried to find another policeman. An ambulance from the Long Island College Hospital was called, and the policeman was taken there insensible.

McSherry was at once hailed by his fellow-patrolmen as the first victim of the "fixed post" order. He reported for duty at 11 o'clock on Tuesday night, had a stationary post for two hours, then relieved the nearest fellow-patrolman on a "walking post," until 3 o'clock, when he returned to the stationary post. He was to keep this for two hours more—until 5 o'clock.

In the hospital McSherry said he had begun to feel weak about 4 o'clock, but feared to walk even a few steps lest a report of neglect of duty might be made against him, so he stood until he dropped unconscious.

His case puzzles the hospital physicians. They doubt that simple fatigue would affect a man so.

JERSEY FOLK PROSPERING.

Bank Statement Shows $16,000,000 Increase in Deposits.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 2.—The statement issued to-day by Vivian M. Lewis, State Commissioner of Banking and Insurance, shows financial institutions of New Jersey made gains of nearly $20,000,000 in resources and more than $16,000,000 in deposits in the last three months over the corresponding period of last year. The resources of the 131 banking houses aggregate $370,562,791 and deposits total $340,200,000. These figures do not include National banks.

Aggregate resources of the eighty-six trust companies are $234,798,422, an increase of $13,773,492 over last year. The twenty-five savings banks have resources of $116,945,495, an increase of $5,076,179, while the resources of the twenty State banks are $18,847,875, an increase of $1,020,686.

Commerce Board Denies Relief Under Long and Short Haul Clause.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—A general denial of all applications by express companies for relief under the long and short haul provision of the law was entered to-day by the Inter-State Commerce Commission in cases where commodities are shipped from points of production to points of consumption, the same or similar rates not being applicable to or from intermediate points.

It was not shown by the applications what particular rates they were intended to cover, and the commission declines flatly to grant any general permission under the law.

NATIONAL CITY INQUIRY ENDS

Wickersham Said to be Against Security Company Idea.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Attorney General Wickersham has about completed his inquiry into the National City Company, the corporation recently formed by the Directors of the National City Bank of New York, to hold bank stocks. It is understood he will in a few days send a report to Secretary MacVeagh of the Treasury, saying whether in his opinion any transgression of the National banking law is involved.

The question in the case of the National City Company is said to be substantially paralleled in other cities and it is said the Department of Justice has taken cognizance of the First Trust Company, reported to be the "security company" of the First National Bank of Chicago and the First Security Company, said to have been created by the First National Bank of New York. Records in the office of the Controller of the Currency are said to show the existence of nearly 800 smaller and similar corporations throughout the country, of which the Department of Justice did not know when it began its inquiry into the National City Company.

What Attorney General Wickersham's report to Secretary MacVeagh will be is not known. Mr. Wickersham refuses to discuss it, but in the Treasury it is hinted that it will be unfavorable to the security company idea, unless there is a bona fide dissociation of the banks and the companies.

Less than a week ago Government officials learned that the organization of the National City Company had been completed and that the bank shares and other stocks of which it was formed would had been transferred to it. It was said that those transfers included the shares of stock which Directors of the National City Bank have been holding in other institutions in New York and other cities, which constituted what is popularly referred to as "National City Bank control." The Directors of the National City Bank had been holding the stocks in their own names, but it was generally reported in banking circles that they held them for their bank.

HUNGRY DOGS ATTACK BOY.

One Took Away His Package of Meat, and the Other Bit Him.

Six-year-old Richard Flood, accompanied by his ten-year-old brother Andrew, was carrying a package of meat from a butcher shop to his home at 308 East 135th Street last night when, opposite 270 East 135th Street, two dogs came bounding up, attracted apparently by the meat's smell. Richard clutched the package all the more tightly and tried to run. But one of the dogs, a St. Bernard, sprang against him, knocking him down, and causing the package of meat to fall from his hand.

The St. Bernard then pounced on the meat and dashed off with it, while the other dog, a mongrel, continued to run around the prostrate boy and bark. Richard kicked the second dog, and the latter, becoming angry, fixed its teeth first in Richard's left arm and then in his side. The dog proceeded to worry the boy, and although thirty or forty people gathered to watch, none dared a rescue until Emmet Burns, a carpenter, of 313 East 135th Street came along. Burns seized the dog by the throat and choked it until it let the boy go.

Burns continued to hold the struggling dog by the throat until Policeman Dunn of the Alexander Avenue Station got a rope and tied it around the dog's neck. The dog was then dragged to the police station and tied up in a cell.

Burns had been badly scratched about the arms by the struggling dog's paws. Both the carpenter and the boy had their wounds dressed by Dr. Freston of Lincoln Hospital, and then went to their homes. The police say the dog was apparently not mad, but just hungry, and angry at being kicked.

TO CHECKMATE AEROPLANES.

Inventor of Aerial Torpedo Controls It by a Wireless Plant.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Aug. 2.—A. J. Roberts of New Zealand, who is better known as an English aviator, gave an exhibition of his aerial torpedo at a theatre in this city this morning, in which the dirigible aircraft was at all times under perfect control by his wireless plant.

Mr. Roberts had a small model dirigible about 15 feet long by 4½ deep. The gas bag was made of 4,000 pig skins. After the spectators had satisfied themselves that there were no wires around, Mr. Roberts sent a spark from his wireless coil and the machine started out into the audience.

By means of two small propellers in front, mounted on a swinging arm, the dirigible was directed. By sending forth a certain spark from his coil the inventor caused one of the other of these propellers to revolve and thereby determine the direction of the machine. Beneath the framework were two other propellers which made the dirigible ascend or descend.

The inventor asserted that he can manufacture an aerial torpedo at a cost of $25,000 which will put an end to the threatened invasion of modern warfare by aeroplanes. He can, with this aerial torpedo, he says, put any of them out of business in short order. He can control his machine as far as the eye can reach, he says.

PASOLINI DIVORCE FINAL.

Annulment of Former Miss Montague's Marriage to Count Is Affirmed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Aug. 2.—Following the verdict on July 22 in the ecclesiastical court declaring the marriage of Count and Countess Pasolini null and void, the civil court to-day returned a like verdict, finding a ground for illegality in a statement made in the marriage papers by the American Consul regarding the spinsterhood of the Countess, who was Miss Mildred Montague of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Annulment of the marriage of Miss Montague to Count Pasolini has been sought for years. An estrangement between them became known early in 1910, when the young Countess unexpectedly arrived at her father's home in Chattanooga without her husband.

The difficulty of obtaining the ecclesiastical annulment was so great that members of the Montague family were almost abandoning their attempt when a young priest, a friend of the family, after having carefully studied the documents, found that the marriage could be annulled because of a defect which, in ecclesiastical language, he called "clandestinity." It took months to elucidate this discovery, however, and over 1,000 letters had to be produced for the Roman Congregation before the decree of annulment was obtained. Thereafter the civil annulment was daily awaited as a practical certainty.

Miss Mildred Montague is the daughter of Dwight Preston Montague, a cotton oil merchant and railroad magnate, reputed to be the wealthiest man in Chattanooga. A sister of the former Countess Pasolini, Miss Carolyn, married Count Nazino Rasponi, cousin of Count Pasolini, in October, 1909. When the steamer Republic was sunk in collision with the Florida, the Countess Pasolini was a passenger on the former vessel.

SAY ASQUITH USURPS KING'S PREROGATIVE

Unionists so Describe His Obtaining Guarantees for Creating Peers to Pass Veto Bill.

VOTE OF CENSURE PLANNED

Balfour to Propose One Monday—Premier Is Accused of Using the Crown for His Party.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—Mr. Balfour today gave notice in the House of Commons that on Monday next he will move a vote of censure on the Government on the ground that Mr. Asquith's advice to the King to create peers for the purpose of coercing the House of Lords was a gross violation of constitutional liberty.

This is the most important development in the political crisis which has taken place since the announcement of what the Unionists describe as Mr. Asquith's coup d'état—that is, his statement that he had obtained guarantees from the King for the creation of new peers.

Properly to estimate its character, one must remember that throughout the constitutional crisis both political parties strongly deprecated any action which might bring the sovereign into "the dust and strife of party conflict." Mr. Balfour's argument on Monday will be that Mr. Asquith has been careless of the prestige and dignity of the throne, and that he has practically annexed, for the purposes of his party, the prerogative of the crown, which previously has been recognized as a moderating influence and a mediator between parties, so that, in the perpetual encounter between them, the permanent interests of the nation come to no harm.

On what date, Mr. Balfour will ask, were royal guarantees given? It is the general idea they were given last November or December. The theory which the Unionist leader will now develop is that by obtaining the guarantees before the Parliament bill had come before the Lords and had been rejected by them, that is, before the actual need of ned peers had arisen, and before the number of them necessary had been strictly defined, and not left unlimited, Mr. Asquith made an unconstitutional use of the royal prerogative and treated the crown with disrespect by making the King serve the interests of one party.

"But for this outrageous coup d'état," writes a Unionist in The Daily Mail, "it might have been possible for King George to have intervened even now and used his influence with the leaders of both parties to secure a compromise.

"Mr. Asquith committed a crime in cold blood. He has been unfaithful to the guardianship of our greatest treasure—the independence of the crown.

"Himself a puppet of his Irish task masters, he treated the throne with disrespect, for which he should hereafter suffer impeachment when the nation wearies of his unscrupulous revolutionary violence, and when it discovers that under the pretense of passing a mere routine measure, he usurped the power which no country ever before committed to a frock-coated politician."

The London Times says that Mr. Balfour's decision to move a vote of censure was come to after consultation with the leaders of the Unionist stalwarts, who opposed the official policy of their party as regulated by Mr. Balfour and Lord Lansdowne.

The paper hopes that the new plan may bring about a reunion of the two sections, and commends it as free from the objections attending the creation of peers which the stalwart policy of resistance, if successful, would have necessitated. This is tantamount to suggesting that the impeachment of the Liberal Premier for treason may serve as an opposition battle cry.

EXPELS CORRESPONDENTS.

Khalifa Won't Allow Francis MacCullagh and Alan Ostler in Agadir.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—Word was received here to-day that two newspaper men, Francis MacCullagh and Alan Ostler, had been expelled from Agadir, Morocco, by the Khalifa of Agadir, on the ground that they were not provided with letters of introduction to him. The correspondents were refused shelter and were obliged to sleep in tents. It is suggested that the Germans objected to their presence.

A telegram received to-night from Mr. Ostler says the commander of the German cruiser Berlin offered to intercede with the Khalifa in his behalf, but the offer was rejected on the ground that he did not wish to owe his protection to any other than the British flag.

Francis MacCullagh is an American, and has frequently represented newspapers of this country in connection with events of international interest. He was with a branch of the Russian Army during the Russo-Japanese war, and was captured with other correspondents by the Japanese at the battle of Mukden.

GATES SLIGHTLY BETTER.

Financier Is Resting Easy—Physicians Still Hopeful of His Recovery.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—The condition of John W. Gates was pronounced to-night by his doctor as slightly better. He is resting easy.

Dr. Gros believes there still is a chance of the financier coming safely through his illness if the treatment for the kidneys succeeds, as the heart and lungs show a tendency toward improvement.

Dr. Ryan, the London specialist, who recently was called into consultation by Dr. Gros, says in a letter from Carlsbad that, knowing the iron constitution and remarkable power of resistance of Mr. Gates, he considers he has a chance for recovery.

PUMPING OUT THE NIOBE.

When Divers Have Patched Cruiser She Will Proceed to Port.

CLARKES HARBOR, N. S., Aug. 2.—Fears that the Canadian cruiser Niobe would sink because of the large amount of water entering through holes punched in the hull when she struck a ledge off Cape Sable on Sunday were dispelled today. The pumps have reduced the water very satisfactorily. During the night the ship's stern rose seven inches.

Divers are patching the hole. When all of the holes have been [illegible]

MOROCCO ADJUSTMENT NEAR?

Basis of Settlement Reported Reached by France and Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The London Times displays prominently a statement to the effect that it has reason to believe that a possible basis of agreement on the Morocco question has been reached, and that the compensation demanded by Germany will be granted in the rectification of the Kamerun-Congo frontier and by the transfer to Germany of part of the French Congo, but not necessarily on the coast.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Aug. 2.—Clarence W. Barron, editor of the Boston News Bureau, who returned from Europe on the Mauretania, publishes a survey of the European political situation, the drift of which is not reassuring to those who hope for a peaceful solution of the Morocco problem.

"No longer is German railway equipment visibly marked for military operations, for she no longer has fears on land. Her war energies can mean no other than a sea contest.

"In Germany every automobile, though privately owned, must, by secret instructions, know its post in case of war. In England they take no such precautions. They know every automobile and taxicab is at the service of the Government in case of war and cannot well leave the island. John Bull has counted his resources, measured his capacity for the movement of troops to the coast, recounted his warships and stands ready, but does not make any fuss about it.

"Germany has misread the situation in England. She has taken the English Parliamentary discussions, the purpose of the House of Commons to curb the House of Lords, and the bitter complaints against Lloyd George and his schemes as indicative of internal dissension. But the whole of Great Britain and Ireland is ready to a man to forget everything else and attack Germany at the first provocation."

12,000 LONDON DOCKERS QUIT

Strike of Laborers Threatens to Paralyze British Meat Trade.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The meat trade of England is seriously threatened by a strike of 12,000 dock laborers at the London docks to-day, growing out of a dispute over wages. The men claim that their employers promised an increase commencing July 31, but their pay envelopes did not contain the advance. Separate meetings of the strikers and the employers were held to discuss the situation.

At least twenty steamers, including the Minnehaha, which has just arrived at Tilbury with a cargo of dressed beef from America; the Anglian from Boston, with boxed meats, and other American freighters, are unable to discharge. Many other vessels are loaded with meat from Australia, New Zealand, and Argentina.

The meat and other perishable goods are being taken care of in refrigerators aboard the steamers, but if the strike continues there will be a shortage in the London provinces. Police reserves were sent to the docks, but their services were not required. The men went quietly from steamer to steamer, calling on their fellow workers to join the movement, and in every case were successful.

A general strike throughout the port of London was officially declared to-night at a mass meeting of dock and riverside laborers.

GERMAN-JAPANESE ENTENTE.

Berlin Hints That Nippon Seeks One to Offset New Treaty with England.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Aug. 2.—The Marine Rundschau, the official monthly review issued by the German Navy Department, publishes conspicuously a dispatch from Tokio indicating that Japan will seek to "compensate" herself for the disadvantages she suffers under the revised treaty with England by a rapprochement with Germany.

Encouragement in this direction is seen in the circumstance that prominent Japanese like Viscount Aoka and two Cabinet Ministers, Goto and Hirato, are taking the initiative in the reorganization of the defunct "Society for the Cultivation of German-Japanese Friendly, Scientific and Social Relations."

Gen. Nogi, the victor of Port Arthur, who is visiting Berlin, is receiving distinguished attentions from military leaders. The General will be the Kaiser's personal guest at a great military parade at Mayence on Aug. 14.

Gen. Nogi returns directly to Japan via Siberia without visiting the United States, as Admiral Togo is doing.

Capt Potts, who is the chief of the Naval Intelligence Bureau in the Navy Department, said that Admiral Togo will have an opportunity to see everything of interest in the navy yards and shipbuilding plants, and he may inspect the battleships that happen to be in port at any of the cities he visits. At New York he will be able to see the finest types of three different classes of American battleships. These are the 16,000-ton flagship Connecticut, the Dreadnought North Dakota, and the new Florida, the last-named being the most powerful battleship afloat.

It was considered doubtful last night that the Lusitania would arrive in New York in time to dock to-night. Mr. Hale said that if the liner arrived at a reasonable hour the Admiral would be taken off. Should she be later than 10 o'clock in arriving at Quarantine, he will be taken off between 6 and 7 o'clock to-morrow morning. Mr. Hale said he had been informed by the Cunard Line that it was quite probable that the liner would not be up to-night.

Those who will go down the bay to meet Admiral Togo on the Seneca are Mr. Hale, Capt. Potts, Lieut. Cook, Commander Hiraga, the Japanese Naval Attaché in Washington; Consul General Midsuno of Japan, Major Gen. Grant and his aid, Capt. Fenton, and Mr. Hanihara, the First Secretary of the Japanese Embassy in Washington. Ambassador Uchida will join the party at Baltimore to-morrow and accompany the Admiral to Washington.

Police Commissioner Waldo has provided a mounted police escort for Admiral Togo when he calls on Mayor Gaynor to-morrow morning, and another to accompany Mayor Gaynor when he returns the call. A special detachment of police will meet the Seneca when she lands the Admiral and his party at the recreation pier at the foot of East Twenty-fourth Street and escort him to his hotel. Detectives will also be assigned to watch the Hotel Knickerbocker while he is in New York and to accompany him on his tours of the city.

Admiral Togo is accompanied only by Commander Tamaguchi, his naval aide, and one servant. It was denied at the Hotel Knickerbocker that an elevator had been reserved for his private use, or that a Japanese cook had been engaged to prepare his meals. He will be provided with any Japanese dishes he may desire, and they will be prepared by the Knickerbocker's own kitchen staff.

CUBAN REVOLT A FIASCO.

Acevedo, in Hiding with One Supporter, Offers to Surrender.

HAVANA, Aug. 2.—Minister of the Interior Machado stated this evening that Gen. Acevedo, who, with a few men, started an uprising at Regla on Monday night, and for whom search has been made by rurales and troops, to-day sent a message to Gov. Asbert of Havana province, saying that he and one comrade were hiding on a farm at no great distance from Havana. The message said Acevedo desired to surrender if his life was not placed in jeopardy.

Gov. Asbert consulted with President Gomez, who directed that he send a reply to the fugitives stating that they might come in and stand trial in the civil court. In addition to a charge of treason one of murder is pending against them for killing Manuel Naranjo, a truckman of Luyano, who, it is alleged, was shot by Acevedo and his party the night they started the uprising, for refusing to act as their guide. The expectation is that Acevedo will surrender before morning at Jaruco, twenty miles west of Havana.

From all parts of the island the Government continues to receive reports of absolute tranquillity.

Prof. Clark Presides at Berne Meeting of Bureau of Peace.

BERNE, Aug. 2.—Prof. John Clark of Columbia University to-day opened the International Permanent Bureau of Peace, which will arrange for the International Peace Congress, to be held in Rome in September.

Official Switzerland is greatly pleased that the conference is being held within this country's borders, and the delegates were cordially welcomed by Herr Gobat, the national Councilor.

The press also extends a welcome, pointing out the significance of the gathering at the moment that arbitration treaties are being signed by the United States with Great Britain and France.

KILLED USELESS HUSBAND.

Wife Gives Excuse That She Could Not Make a Man of Him.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2.—Unable, as she said, to make a man of her husband, Anna Langley, a frail woman 19 years old, to-day shot and killed him. They had been married fifteen months.

Early to-day James Langley left home saying he did not intend to return. Mrs. Langley bought a revolver and started to hunt her husband. She found him in a saloon. According to bystanders Langley turned on her with a torrent of abuse. Without a word the wife fired four shots. One struck Langley and he died on the way to a hospital. Mrs. Langley was arrested.

"I do not see why I should be detained," she said at the city prison. "I did nothing wrong, and I am not sorry. Since our marriage I have supported my husband and myself by working as a stenographer. I tried to make him stay away from saloons. I endured his abuse. I tried to instil some ambition into him, and coach him for the firemen's civil service examination. He would not try. I could endure no more."

TRAIN HITS SWITCH TOWER.

Mistake of Green Tower Man Causes Accident on New York Central.

Special to The New York Times.

FISHKILL LANDING, N. Y., Aug. 2.—At Cold Spring, seven miles south of this village, a fast freight train on the New York Central, bound for New York, plunged through a signal tower, tearing the building to splinters and almost mortally injuring the towerman, John Walsh, early this morning.

As the train pulled into the village the engineer blew his whistle for a switch opening, the signal being meant for tower 45½. A new tower is being erected a short distance away and is known as tower 46. Between these two towers a new switch has been made, but is not yet open to use. Tower 45½ stands on the new switch, but in course of time will be removed.

A green tower man was on duty at tower 46 and when he heard the signal thought it was meant for him. He opened the new switch. As the engineer meant to make a switch some distance away, he was surprised when his train went jumping over the new switch. Before he could stop it the train crashed into tower 45½. John Walsh, the tower man, saw it coming and hastened to get out of the tower. He was on the stairs when the train struck it. The stairway was carried several hundred feet and he was thrown a considerable distance, suffering serious injuries.

The tower was completely demolished and the two tracks of the road were blocked for several hours. Several hundred men were hurried to the scene to clear the wreckage.

Sixtieth Anniversary of The New York Times

The sixtieth anniversary of the establishment of The New York Times will be celebrated on Monday, Sept. 18, by a Sixtieth Anniversary Section, which will include the history of The New York Times, the public movements with which it has been identified, and a summary of the important changes and historical events in New York City since 1851.

Fac similes of the first page of the New York newspapers published on the morning of Sept. 18, 1851, will be an unusually attractive feature, contrasting, as it will, the styles of typography which made up those issues with the present-day newspaper styles. The section will also contain a symposium by the leading editors of the country on the progress of journalism during the last sixty years.

Advertisements in the Sixtieth Anniversary Supplement WILL BE RESTRICTED to firms and institutions in business at least sixty years.

...ELLY BEAT BOY PUT IN HIS CARE

Victim's Bruised Body, Shown in Court, Makes Magistrate Weep and One Woman Faint.

LONG HID HIS SUFFERING

Twelve-Year-Old Tried to Shield S. A. Nathan, Drug Clerk, Who Made Him a Household Slave.

A case of cruelty to a child, which officials of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children say is the worst ever brought to their attention, came to light yesterday with the arrest of Solomon A. Nathan, a drug clerk employed at 181 Central Avenue, Brooklyn. He is charged with beating his twelve-year-old ward, Jacob Blum, who lives with him in a four-room rear apartment at 764 East 152d Street, the Bronx. Nathan was arraigned in the Morrisania Court and held in $500 bail. The sight of the boy, hardly an inch of whose body was not discolored by the many beatings he had received, brought tears to Magistrate Herman's eyes.

Dr. W. Travis Gibb, examining physician of the Children's Society, made a thorough examination. Both cheeks of the boy were bruised and discolored, and the eyes were swollen and thoroughly blackened. On his right side there were large contusions over the shoulder, around the arm and down to the middle of the forearm. On the left arm there were similar contusions. The boy's back was covered by one large contusion extending from his neck to his waist, and within this area were recently inflicted welts, some of them half an inch high. On the right thigh there was a swollen blue area running down to the knee. On the left leg there was one large contusion measuring 5 by 9 inches, and another measuring 3 by 4 inches. Over the entire body the tissues were greatly swollen.

According to the agents of the Children's Society all of the wounds were declared by the boy to have been inflicted either with a knotted bamboo cane or a shawl strap. Dr. Gibb, in his report, said he believed the wounds were caused by assault with weapons.

Nathan Not His Uncle.

Jacob Blum came to this country eighteen months ago from Austria, following the death of his parents. An uncle, Aaron Blum, who lived in Brooklyn, took care of the boy on his arrival and sent him to school. But five months after the boy arrived the uncle was called back to Austria, and intrusted his nephew to the care of his friend, Nathan, whom he had met in Brooklyn. Nathan at that time lived on Eagle Avenue, Bronx, and shortly after moved to 764 East 152d Street, where he rented a four-room apartment on the fourth floor for $18 a month. His young ward was the only other occupant of the apartment, and kept house for his guardian, whom he thereafter called "uncle."

That was thirteen months ago, and at first little was seen of the boy by the other tenants of the house. Occasionally they heard feeble cries, but no one gave them serious thought. Lately, however, when the weather was warm Jacob came downstairs more frequently, and gradually the tenants learned more about the boy and about the uncle, who never spoke to any one in the house.

They learned that the boy arose early in the morning and prepared Nathan's breakfast. When the uncle left at 8 o'clock the boy would begin the day's work. First he washed all the dishes and then dusted all the furniture in the apartment. Once a week he dragged all the heavy upholstered furniture to the roof of the house and beat the cushions.

For his luncheon he was allowed 5 cents a day. When the uncle arrived in the evening he always had supper prepared for him.

The boy was not allowed to go to school. Twice the truant officers came to the house, the other tenants said, to see about the boy, but in both instances no one was at home. The boy told one of the women in the house that his uncle often taught him out of books during the evening hours.

"How did you get that mark on your arm?" inquired one of the tenants of the boy on one occasion.

"Oh, I bumped myself on the wall," the boy replied.

At different times he was asked to explain the cause of wounds which could so plainly be seen on his face and hands, and each time the boy answered that he had fallen downstairs or in the street.

Finally Admits the Beatings.

On Friday the boy was seen going out for his luncheon as usual, but his eyes were black, and he groped his way.

"How did you get those black eyes?" inquired one of the women on the front stoop who had often befriended him before.

"Oh," wailed the boy, "my uncle would kill me if he knew that I told you, but he did it. He hit me. He hits me often."

"And why did he hit you?" was asked.

"Because I broke a picture frame when I was dusting it."

The boy looked sickly, too," one of the tenants said yesterday. "When he first came here he was fat and plump and always smiled. Now he is thin and overworked. When we saw those black eyes five of us sat down and wrote letters to the Children's Society, and yesterday the men came around to serve the summons."

When Agents Leggatt and Pasarra of the Children's Society reached the house on Tuesday to get the boy they had difficulty in taking him to the Children's Society.

"I haven't washed the dishes yet," he wailed, "and I must get dinner before uncle comes or he will thrash me."

When the agents asked to take the bamboo cane and the shawl strap with them for evidence the boy again persisted that these things belonged to his uncle, and that they should not be taken away. In every way he was loyal to Nathan.

Before Judge Russell in the Children's Court Nathan admitted being harsh to his ward at times, but denied that he was unnecessarily cruel. He was arraigned in the Morrisania Court, where he pleaded guilty and demandad an immediate examination.

"Your Honor," he said, addressing Magistrate Herman, "I want my hearing immediately, and I want to be paroled. I want you to suspend sentence, and I'll never be guilty of such a thing again."

"And why do you want me to suspend sentence?" inquired Magistrate Herman.

"Oh," said the prisoner nonchalantly, "I want to save the county the expense of a trial."

Denounces the Prisoner.

Then Magistrate Herman ordered the attendants to remove the boy's shirt, and when he saw the blue marks and welts all over the boy's body he did not even try to check his tears. A woman who said her name was Mrs. Thomas fainted when she saw the marks, and had to be carried from the courtroom.

"This is the worst case of cruelty to children that has ever come to my attention," said the Magistrate after a long pause. Then, addressing Nathan, he said: "If I had it in my power to do so, I'd send you away for life. On the human calendar you are about as low as any one I ever heard of, and I have heard of many bad cases."

Nathan is a powerfully built man, weighing about 200 pounds. He is 30 years old. Magistrate Herman held him in $500 bail on the charge of assault. The boy was remanded to the Children's Society awaiting a further hearing of the case on Aug. 7.

It was learned later that he had a sister, Minnie Blum, living in Hunter, N. Y. She, it was said, visited the apartment house where the boy lived, and it was said that this sister had told her brother on a visit about six months ago that they should not be taken away. In every way he was loyal to Nathan.

ROBERT COLE A SUICIDE.

Negro Song Writer Drowns Himself in Creek in Friends' Presence.

Special to The New York Times.

CATSKILL, N. Y., Aug. 2.—Robert Cole, the colored song writer, author of "The Girl with the Dreamy Eyes" and other popular medleys, committed suicide here at 4:30 o'clock to-day. Cole, who was a member of the theatrical firm of Cole & Johnson, owners of the "Sambo Girls Company," now on tour, reached here Saturday night a nervous wreck from overwork, and registered at the English House, where his mother was stopping. He seemed in better spirits yesterday, and played a number of his own selections for his fellow guests. While walking to-day with friends he reached the Catskill Creek, and, remarking that the water looked inviting, he waded in fully dressed and swam for a few minutes. Then without uttering a word he allowed his body to fall to the bottom, and was drowned before his friends realized that he was not playing.

Cole was 43 years of age, unmarried, and lived at 102 West 136th Street, New York, where the body will be taken for interment after the inquest to-morrow.

"Bob" Cole and his partner, Rosamond Johnson, were among the best known negro performers, appearing in vaudeville and also in musical comedies of their own writing. Cole was the writer of the lyrics and Johnson supplied the music. A number of their songs became popular, especially "Under the Bamboo Tree," which brought the authors a large sum in royalties. Their income was increased by royalties from other songs, and both were very well off financially. Cole was born in Atlanta, Ga. He had been married and divorced. About a year ago he suffered a nervous breakdown from overwork, and was taken to the Manhattan Hospital for the Insane, and later to a private sanitarium. He had improved so much this Summer that he was permitted to go to visit his mother at Catskill.

WOULD TEACH HOW TO SPEND

Is More Needed Than a Knowledge of How to Save, Says School Principal.

The movement to establish public school banks in Massachusetts has aroused much interest in this city, but much of the interest, particularly among educators, has taken the form of opposition, according to James L. Stephenson, a school Principal of Boston, who said yesterday that the feeling was against adding any more fads to the school curriculum.

"What is much more needed by the poor," he said, "is how to spend money. If they learn to spend they will know how to save; that will follow naturally. If anything be taught in a financial way it should be on the spending of money. It should be remembered, after all, that the chief function of money is to be spent, not to be saved. It is wise to save, but wiser to spend well.

"In the struggle for life, ninety-nine one-hundredths of the children of the public schools will be much more concerned in how to obtain the value of their money rather than how to save it. If they get the value there may be some left to put by, but if they have none the banks will languish.

"Extravagance is one of the ruling failings in this country, and the ordinary person has all he can do to make both ends meet. If schools must take up instruction in saving, what is to become of spending, which is more necessary? If it it is to be left to parents and to experience to teach it, I ask, would it not be best to leave it all there and not take up any more of the time that children have for school, teaching something that they will learn in time?"

DENTIST TURNS HIGHWAYMAN

Philadelphia Prisoner Says He Is Dr. Tenney of New York.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 2.—After ineffectual efforts to evade direct answers to Magistrate Call's questions in the Eighth and Jefferson Streets Police Station to-day, a well-dressed prisoner in the dock, accused of highway robbery, admitted that he came from a prominent family, but that pride and poverty had driven him to crime. He said he was Dr. William Tenney, a dentist, of 131 West 125th Street, New York.

Dr. Tenney pleaded with the police not to let his family know of his plight. His parents, he said, were wealthy residents of New York, now spending the Summer at Bayshore, a fashionable resort on Long Island. The man, only 24 years old, said he did not meet with much success in his profession at home, and came to this city, where he failed to obtain employment in any of the establishments that deal in dental supplies.

In desperation he decided to take a chance on collecting by force enough money to enable him to get back to New York. He took $3 and a hat from Harry Donnell of 1101 Poplar Street at Twelfth Street and Girard Avenue. A short time later he robbed J. G. Bennett, a sailor of the U. S. S. Barrington, at Seventh Street and Girard Avenue. While he was thus engaged a policeman placed him under arrest, after a struggle.

While the House Sergeant of the station was slating the prisoner, Donnell rushed in with the story of the attack on him and was amazed to see his assailant.

"He stole my hat, and it is the one he has on," he yelled, as he seized the headpiece.

DISOWNED SON BACK RICH.

Reunited to Father After Making a Fortune in Alaska Mines.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 2.—Ben Stern, a member of the class of 1901 at Cornell, who was driven from home by an irate father four years ago to make his own way in the world, because of his escapades along the "Great White Way" of New York, has "made good."

He arrived in Los Angeles yesterday from Alaska, and, according to his own statement, comes back, not in the rôle of a prodigal son a-hungered for the fatted calf, but with a fatted calf of his own in the shape of more than $1,000,000 wrested by his own hands and skill from the gold fields of Alaska.

Turned out by his father, he had just enough money to take him to Alaska, and he reached the Tanana country just at the time of the Fairbanks boom. There he made many friends as well as a "stake" of considerable size. One of these friends told young Stern about the country which afterward sprang into fame as the Iditarod. Stern was one of the first men in the new mining camp. He staked out some of the best claims, cleared up a fortune, and still holds valuable property there.

Encouraged by his success and longing for a reconciliation with his father, he wrote to the elder Stern that he had "made good," and started for the States to meet his father. In some way the two passed each other, the older man on his way to San Francisco and the younger on his way to Los Angeles. To-morrow the two expect to be reunited here, an exchange of telegrams having been the means of locating each other.

That Stern has had no easy time may be inferred from the fact that in his first two years in Alaska he suffered from frost-bitten hands and feet and a frozen nose.

TWO SOUND BOATS HARASSED BY FOG

Massachusetts Rams a Schooner, Shinnecock Drives Aground in Gardners Bay.

PASSENGERS NOT WORRIED

Vessel the Boston Liner Struck Is Saved After Crew Abandons Her —Other Craft Floated.

In the fog which hung heavy over New York and adjoining waters Tuesday night and early yesterday morning two Sound steamboats met with accidents. The Massachusetts of the Maine Steamship Company, bound down from Boston to this city with several hundred passengers, ran into the fishing schooner Sarah N. Pickering, bound from Stonington to New London with a cargo of 400 tons of granite. After the collision the Massachusetts picked up the crew of the Pickering and brought them to port. The vessel drifted ashore, but was afterward towed into Vineyard Haven by the revenue cutter Acushnet.

The Shinnecock of the Montauk Steamboat Line, nosing her way in toward Shelter Island, shortly after midnight ran her nose into Long Reach at the entrance of Gardiners Bay. Three hundred passengers were on board on their way from this city to Block Island and other points in the Sound. After the first flurry of excitement they had to pass many monotonous hours until help came.

The schooner Pickering was running on the port tack near Gay Head, at the western entrance of Vineyard Sound, when the Massachusetts struck her, Capt. M. B. Taylor of the Massachusetts said that in the fog he could see no lights, and Capt. Frank Haskell of the Pickering did not know he was in the path of another craft until the bow of the Massachusetts loomed above his deck. The bow of the steamboat cut into the upper part of the Pickering's bow, carrying away her bowsprit and head gear. On the schooner, besides the skipper and part owner, were George Blake, the mate; Eben McKinney, Allen Torrey, and Julius Layton.

It appeared to those on the Pickering that she would go down within a very few minutes. The crew cut loose the yawl. Capt. Haskell and one of his crew were thrown into the water. The Captain was drifting away from the small boat when he managed to get hold of a bit of wreckage. One of the men, Blake, struck his leg against the boat in falling overboard, and when the crew landed yesterday he had to limp ashore.

The passengers on the Massachusetts were asleep when the accident happened, and many of them, according to Capt. Taylor, did not know there had been an accident. The few who felt the shock and hastened on deck were assured by the officers that everything was all right. Those who came on deck watched the Massachusetts manoeuvring in the fog and heard the shouts of officers and men as they searched the water for the schooner and her small boat.

At last, after what seemed a long time to the watchers at the Massachusetts' rail, the lights of the schooner were made out, and immediately afterward the officers sighted the small boat with the schooner's crew on board. They were taken aboard and the Massachusetts turned again toward New York. A quick investigation has assured the officers that she was uninjured by the collision.

Both Capt. Haskell and Capt. Taylor were sure the schooner had gone down and with it the skipper's $400 and the belongings of himself and crew. Before he and his men started back to New Bedford late yesterday afternoon a message was received that the schooner was towed into Vineyard Haven by the revenue cutter Acushnet. Instead of going to the bottom she drifted ashore at Cedar Tree Neck.

When the cutter came alongside she found a composite prize crew aboard the derelict, including Capt. Cosca and four men of the New Bedford fishing schooner Filomena Cosca and four men from a Martha's Vineyard fishing vessel. The Cosca's men fell in with the wreck about dawn and drifted ashore with her. The other four men boarded her just before she grounded at Cedar Tree Neck.

When the Shinnecock ended her journey sooner than her commander expected she was threading her way into Gardiners Bay, having made the passage through Plumb Gut in the fog in safety. Capt. Rowland had two lookouts on duty, when, bearing too far to the north, he pushed the nose of his craft into the sand of Long Beach.

There was not the slightest occasion for alarm, as the water was smooth and the bow of the Shinnecock ran well up on the slanting sands and brought up with very little shock. Some of the passengers were jarred out of their sleep, and those who came trooping from their rooms were rather more afraid of being in the fog than of the ship sinking. Among the passengers was C. L. Addington, the Vice President of the Montauk Line.

As the fog cleared two launches came out from Greenport, Toward noon the company's steamship Manhasset, which plies between New London and points at the east end of Long Island, came along.

She took on the passengers bound for Greenport, Shelter Island, and Sag Harbor. The transfer was made in the launch Amy, as the skipper of the Manhasset feared to bring his vessel into shallow water. About 300 passengers bound for Block Island stayed aboard and had a tedious wait until 5:35 in the afternoon, when the Shinnecock was floated, at high water, with the aid of a tug. She proceeded at once to Block Island.

THREE RESCUED AT SEA.

Taken from Sinking Sloop That Only Ropes Held Together.

The three men of nursery rhyme fame who put to sea in a tub had no more adventures than those that befel Capt. Jauquis René, José Fonseca, and Manuel Andredo, who got here yesterday as shipwrecked mariners on the steamship Brika, from Huelva, Spain. They were engaged in trying to bring into the shelter of the Azores their 40-foot, rudderless, waterlogged sloop Theresa, when on July 20 the Brika came along and took them off. They had sailed from Providence on June 14 to fish somewhere off the West Coast of Africa.

The first part of the voyage was made under auspicious conditions. The 17th was near an end when Capt. Réné noticed that the sea was rising and the wind was quickening its pace. By nightfall the vessel was running before a southwest gale. That night her seams began to open up, and the order was given to man the pumps. From that time until the Brika came along the men had to work almost continuously at the pumps.

Taking advantage of one short period of calm, the three passed ropes about the hull and literally tied their craft up like a package to prevent her falling to pieces. They were practically waterlogged when picked up by the Brika.

As the small boat from the steamer approached the rescuers saw that Fonseca carried a tin box. They shouted for him to leave it behind. He paid no attention to them, and, before jumping he threw the box before him into the small boat. The box contained his most cherished belongings, and Fonseca landed yesterday in a light suit, soft shirt, a striped necktie, and a straw hat of this season's vintage, unusual attire for a shipwrecked mariner.

BORDEN MILLS SHUT DOWN.

Closing of Fall River Iron Works Throws 6,000 Cotton Operatives Out.

Special to The New York Times.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 2.—Notices were posted this noon in all seven mills of the Fall River Iron Works Company to the effect that the mills would shut down to-morrow night until further notice.

This means that 6,000 operatives will be thrown out of work.

There is no knowledge here as to how long the plant will be idle, and speculation on this source is varied. It is believed by some that the shut down will last only a few weeks.

M. C. D. Borden, owner of the mills, is known as a leading cotton manufacturer, who in the past has proved himself a good judge of market conditions and necessities.

DURHAM, N. C., Aug. 2.—The Erwin cotton mills, No. 1 at Durham and No. 2 at Duke, the Proximity mills, and the White Oak mills of Greensboro, denim manufacturers, announce a more drastic curtailment beginning Friday when they shut down for two weeks. They have been operated on short time for two years. Low price of denims is offered as the reason for this curtailment.

ESPERANTISTS DINE ON STUFITA KAPONO

One Who Had Been Breaking Stone with Sinclair Too Tired to Speak at the Festeno.

GOOD REPORT FROM CHINA

Where the Boy Finds New World Language Easier Than His Own—An Open Meeting To-night.

La festeno de la Kunveno de la esperantista Asocio de Norda Ameriko was held last night in one of the private dining rooms of the Broadway Central Hotel. In plain English this means that the Esperanto Association of America, which is holding a convention in New York, had its annual dinner last night. About sixty members of the association were at the afternoon meeting and at least one more came to the dinner.

The one more was Donald Stephens, who had been serving eighteen hours in a Delaware jail because he played baseball on Sunday with Upton Sinclair and several others. Just as soon as he got out of jail yesterday afternoon he took a fast train to New York and got to the Broadway Central in time to be called upon for a speech. He excused himself, however, in Esperanto, saying that he had been pounding stone all day, and that was about all he cared to attempt for the time being.

The menu of the evening was printed in the world language, and follows:

MENUO.

Ostroj — Olivoj — Rafanetaj
Esperanto Supo El Pisoj
Blufiso Cipatentita, Lau La Sepa
Glaciligitaj Kukumoj Terpomoj Kun Petroselo

Stufita Kapono Kun Kresoj
Novaj Pisoj — Battatoj
Salato Lau La Nov-Jorka Federacio

A. D. E. A. Speechcitio

Kongreso Kafo

After the waiter had served this exciting repast, the toastmaster, Edwin C. Reed of New York made a short speech extolling the merits of Esperanto. He was followed by James F. Morton, the Rev. Dr. Hubbard of China, who told what Esperanto was doing and could do for the Chinese boy who never could learn the Chinese alphabet; Donald Stevens, Charles E. Wells, J. D. Houlman of Pittsburg, and Secretary Heller of the New York Society. Part of the speeches were made in English and part in Esperanto. At National conventions, it was explained, a National language is used for the benefit of the new members.

Many of those at the dinner are on their way to attend the seventh international convention of Esperantists to be held at Antwerp Aug. 20-27. The President of the National society is John Barrett, the Director General of the Pan-American Bureau at Washington. The convention will continue to-day and to-night there will be an open meeting at the Broadway Central, to which anybody who is interested in learning about Esperanto may come.

STING IN ALIMONY CHECKS.

Husband Wrote His Opinions on Back and Wife Was Ashamed to Cash Them.

Haggai E. Anderson, an employe in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, was brought yesterday morning to the Adams Street Court and arraigned before Magistrate Voorhees on complaint of his wife, to whom he had been previously ordered by the court to pay $5 a week alimony. Mrs. Anderson assured Magistrate Voorhees that the checks from her husband were received by her very promptly, but complained that because of remarks written by Anderson on the backs of checks she had been ashamed to cash them. She said that her husband wrote his various opinions about her, and she was not willing to have outsiders read them.

After warning him not to repeat the offense, Magistrate Voorhees discharged Anderson.

Rabbi Mattuck Accepts London Call.

Rabbi Israel L. Mattuck of Temple Israel, Far Rockaway, announced yesterday that he had accepted a call from the Jewish Religious Union of London. Rabbi Mattuck preached before the London congregation upon its invitation last June, and before he returned to Ameries received a unanimous call. He said to-day that Liberal Judaism in London had been struggling under great difficulties for lack of a leader. He will continue his work here until January.

SEARCH PIER FOR GAMBLING

Gov. Pothier Warns Narragansett ... Sends Sheriff to Suppress Gaming.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 2.—"I propose to clean the State of all these gambling sites," said Gov. Aram J. Pothier to-day. "I have given them warning to quit and I shall meet their defiance with the full power of the State."

Gov. Pothier was referring to gambling in Rhode Island in general and to gamblers at Narragansett Pier in particular. "There will be no harvest for them this Summer if I can prevent it," he continued. "I will go to the limit. I have given Sheriff John R. Wilcox orders to stop all gambling in his county, and I expect that my orders will be carried out to the letter."

Acting on the Governor's orders Sheriff Wilcox, whose territory includes Narragansett, visited the Pier late last night and searched Elm Cottage and the Surf Side for gamblers, gambling, or gambling paraphernalia.

In neither place, however, Sheriff Wilcox said to-day, was there anything in sight that might lead to the inference that gambling was, or had been, going on, last night at least. Men and women, church parties, as they were described, occupied various rooms, being seated about the tables.

"I don't think there is any gambling to amount to anything going on at the Pier," said Sheriff Wilcox to-day. "But we intend to keep at it and keep things quiet. Gov. Pothier means business. He is sincere in what he says, and we will do all we can to keep conditions at the Pier free from gambling."

MORE BONES IN THE MAINE.

Skull of Assistant Engineer Merritt Identified by Its Conformation.

HAVANA, Aug. 2.—The bones which were found yesterday in the ward room of the battleship Maine were identified to-day as those of Assistant Engineer Merritt. Identification was based upon the conformation of the skull and the height of the frame. Near the bones were found part of an officer's cap, some uniform buttons, and a fountain pen.

The bones were discovered at the precise spot where Midshipman Boyd testified that he and Merritt had been separated by the inrush of water.

In the exploration of the after berth-deck many personal effects were found, however, including Lieut. Jenkins's revolver, with his name engraved on it.

Two more bodies, both of them beyond identification, were found near the warrant officers' quarters on the port side of the berth deck. These make the total number of bodies recovered twenty-one.

BANKS FOR THE POOR.

There is significance in the embarrassment of a British bank for the poorer class of depositors on the same day that accounts are published of the opening of our local postal savings bank. The Yorkshire Penny Bank had deposits of over ninety million dollars, and its business has been taken over by other banks, thus averting an incident which otherwise would have been costly to other depositors than those of the embarrassed concern. The explanation given is that the Yorkshire Penny Bank was embarrassed by the same considerations that caused the suspension of the Birkbeck Bank not long ago. That is to say, there was misjudgment of investments, but no misconduct. It is hard to blame bank managers for investing in the most conservative and gilt-edged securities, yet doing so is exactly what is embarrassing more British banks than those openly named. The depreciation of the very best classes of British stocks has been severe, and has resumed its course after having reached bottom in the opinions of those who wished it might be true. The current week has witnessed the lowest prices ever recorded.

It is mistrust of such banking experiences which is driving some depositors into our postal savings bank. They have lost money in other banks, but place full faith and credit in the United States. It is well that it should be understood that this means pledging the faith of the individuals of the Nation. We are all of us responsible for the redemption of the obligation of the postal savings bank, whatever may be the cost to the Government, that is to say, to ourselves. This confidence is touching in high degree, and is amazing. There is no business scandal which is not outdone by Government scandals. It is hardly too much to say that the Government is as conspicuous for inefficiency as many private corporations are for efficiency, and that on the average general trade is better conducted than Government business. Yet the poor prefer to trust the Government, taking 2 per cent. from the Government rather than 4 from private savings banks, and more in private investments. This sentiment is an asset of Government, and can hardly be overvalued. In times of crisis faith in Government may mean National life or death. The resources available to the United States while this sentiment is justified is incalculable. England, with less than half our population, is able to borrow four times our National debt. There is no nation in the world which could borrow, say, five or ten billions as easily as ourselves, so long as we foster confidence in Government.

Yet it is worth while to count the cost. Governments have no way of using money for profit. The only thing Governments can do with trust funds is to invest them in national securities. That is what England does, and what we are doing. It is planned that we put these dollars intrusted to the National care in 2 per cent. bonds, which on any investment basis are not worth their face. England has the larger part of a billion dollars in its postal banks, and the larger part of that is invested in consols. Their credit is perfect, but their price is not guaranteed. In short, it is the depreciation of consols which is embarrassing other institutions. It has been estimated that the consols in the postal savings banks have cost the Government $100,000,000 more than their worth to-day. Exactness of statement is impossible, publication of the facts having been suspended in 1903 for reasons which may be imagined. The last published deficiency was $55,-000,000, when consols were ten points higher, and deposits were smaller. It is the essence of banking to pay on demand, yet this large liability is carried without any reserve, and without any resource except taxation to make good. Foresight is better than hindsight. [illegible] who are trusting our postal [illegible] must not be disappointed in their [illegible] Some would prefer that the Gov[illegible] should pay money's worth for [illegible] rather than teach frugality by [illegible] the money of the poor at half [illegible] ought to receive for it. The [illegible] will take some thinking over.

PROMOTION, AND OTHERS.

[illegible] Admiral ROBLEY D. EVANS [illegible] his re-

tion was made to date back to the time of his supreme achievement, April 6, 1909, "with the highest retired pay." Now it is reported that the officers of the Bureau of Navigation at Washington are puzzled. Admiral PEARY's retirement created a vacancy among the Captains of Engineers, with opportunity for promotions in the line below them. Should all these promotions be retroactive, dating back, with pay to their beneficiaries, to April 6, 1909?

The statement of the question refutes it. The retirement was made this year, when the act was passed. Its dating back with pay was a complimentary fiction and a reward for but one man. That was the intent of Congress. He had earned the reward, while at the same time serving the Government as Commander of Civil Engineers, and being paid therefor. It is absurd to suppose that this legal fiction was created for the sake of subordinates who stayed at home, earned their pay, and received it. They earned no bounty. Doubtless few of them would ask it.

LETTING IN THE LIGHT.

The Democratic leaders in the House have given another proof of foresight and breadth of view in their decision to accept the Senate amendments to the bill requiring publicity in campaign expenditures. There is reason to think that the amendments were not put in by the Senate in good faith. They are sweeping and severe, and as they apply to primary elections—which are decisive in the South—they were expected to arouse opposition among Southern Democrats in the House. But, not for the first time, these gentlemen have waived their personal and sectional interests to enable their party to carry through a measure of National importance. It is possible that some of the provisions of the bill go beyond what public opinion in some parts of the country will sustain, but there are enough chances that they will work to make the experiment worth while. One clause is in effect revolutionary, the one requiring that the details be made public as to all promises relating to patronage or influence as to private or corporate employment, and declaring that "no candidate for the House or Senate may give anything or promise anything to aid in the election of any one in the State Legislature." It is easy to understand what havoc would be worked by the strict enforcement of this law in, say, the State of Illinois, or even in the State of New York.

WARSHIPS ON THE LAKES.

Just before the dissolution of the Dominion Parliament the Premier, in reply to a question, said that the Government was considering the negotiation of a new treaty with the United States regarding warships on the Great Lakes. Canada, said the Premier, had always observed the provisions of the century-old treaty which neutralizes the lakes, putting both owners of their shores under a self-denying ordinance regarding both ships and forts. The implication of the Premier that the United States has not been altogether scrupulous in observing the terms of the old treaty will come as a surprise to many on this side the border, and yet there is a basis for the suggestion. We have recently had ten ships on the lakes which the Canadians call warships, although all but one or two of them more resemble tugs, and are worthless against any vessels armed at all. The point is that the Canadian vessels are not armed. Doubtless the Canadian canals offer a better mode of reinforcement than we possess, but canals are not warships, and the treaty is silent regarding canals.

The Canadians are tender about more things than our warships on the lakes. They dislike the naval training school, which cost $3,500,000, and was opened on the first of last month. And they dislike our naval manoeuvres or "war game." Our point of view is that these things have no reference to Canada. We are thinking of the stimulation of our lake shipyards and of developing our general naval establishment without thinking of Canada at all. That seems to be part of our offense. We have not shown the same deference to the Canadian point of view that Canada has shown to ours. Without intending encroachment we have made one request after another for the enlargement of the conditions of the treaty which we did not wish to break. And Canada has made repeated concessions, until it seems that the time has arrived for it to draw the line. Either we should observe the treaty or it should be enlarged for both parties to it. Recently requests for favors have not been conceded so freely. In fact, our "war game" this year was abandoned within a fortnight at the direct request of England on behalf of Canada. Now we must face the new negotiations with a policy regarding the old treaty.

It can hardly be doubted that Americans on both sides the border are united against the establishment of militarism on this continent. This feeling is so strong in the United States that it would submerge the interests which have caused the encroachments to which Canada objects. It would be better to provide that neither side should have either forts or warships than that each side should have all it wanted. There is indeed some need for an armed patrol of the customs and fishery services, and the old treaty makes adequate provision for this duty on a basis of equality to which the United States ought to return. Then the subject might be allowed to drop.

defenses and posts for watching each other at strategic points. Batteries would threaten each other across the Niagara gorge. The Detroit and Sarnia tunnels would be mined so that they could be destroyed at an instant's notice. An example could be found in the Simplon tunnel, across which are erected iron doors worked by electricity, and capable of resisting the rush of a railway express. Instead of offering the world the spectacle of an undefended border across the continent, and with peace undisturbed for a century, we might exhaust our ingenuity in imitating the bad examples of the Old World, where neighbors are presumptively enemies rather than friends.

Nothing like this ought to find favor on our side. There are suggestions of reproach to us that Canada finds it necessary to open the subject. There are those ready to improve upon our domestic institutions, but nobody can suggest any improvement in our political relations with Canada. Let well alone is a good working principle, and we hope both sides will adopt it. No treaty can improve it. The old treaty is good enough, if lived up to.

CIVIL SERVICE EXEMPTIONS.

When Gov. DIX appointed Commissioners KRAFT, BURTON, and LUDVIGH, it was a foregone conclusion that the Civil Service Commission would be run conformably with the desires of the political machine leaders. The news, therefore, that Gov. DIX had approved the State Civil Service Board's exemption from competitive examination of more than fifty places in the State and county service, created by laws providing for a State Fire Marshal, a Conservation Commission, a Private Banking Bureau in the Controller's office, and a Labor Department, was not unexpected.

But the action of the Governor was deplorable. The deputies of the State Fire Marshal, his Secretary, Chief Engineer, and Chief Inspector, all of whom are exempted, should be qualified experts. So should the Commissioner of Private Banking and his subordinate examiners of banks. Inspectors of factories have complex problems to deal with in enforcing the laws for safety and decent conditions in the factories. The Wardens of the new State Farm for Women, and the Secretary and Engineer of the Bronx Parkway Commission should not be political hacks. The exemptions from the civil service rules have opened these offices as rewards to party "heelers."

THE "METRIC LOBBY."

We did not know, until we received a letter to the effect from Mr. SAMUEL S. DALE of Boston, that a "lobby" was being maintained at Washington with the dastardly intent of forcing the metric system upon an unsuspecting country. Mr. DALE accompanies his letter with a printed pamphlet, containing testimony said to have been "suppressed" by the Chairman of the House Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, testimony which Mr. DALE himself gave to that committee, and revealing the awful truth. Plainly, the metric system was conceived in corruption and born in iniquity. Its fathers and sponsors stand at the antipodes of Chinese conservatism, and Mr. DALE is a champion of the Chinese:

Logic Would Carry Him Too Far.

A short time ago a Massachusetts mill had occasion to get a new stencil for marking goods sent to China. The figure of a rooster formed part of the design. In the new stencil the rooster's tail was made a little lower than in the old one. When the goods marked with the new stencil reached China the Chinese noticed the difference in the rooster's tail and refused to accept the goods, thinking the fabric was different from former lots. This incident illustrates the peculiar mind of the Chinese and how important it is for our exporters to conform to Chinese customs. From it you can see how difficult it would be to sell goods to them by new weights and measures.

The Chinese, it seems, love the unscientific English system of measurements, and, potentially, hate the metric system. Those who favor this system are plotting against our trade with China. In Mr. DALE's opinion their motives are of the vilest. Perhaps his extreme opponents would retort that the exporters of American fabrics prefer that their lengths and widths be not measured according to the easily "figgered" tenths, and that they wish to overreach the innocent Chinamen, and all consumers, by taking advantage of arbitrary fractional differences in standard widths of cloth to extort more than commensurate profits. We are not, happily, so blinded with the odium metricum that we cannot perceive the force of Mr. DALE's practical objection. Of course a Government fiat that the prevailing system of weights and measures, however clumsy it be, should be discarded would result in great financial losses in all industries gauged to the requirements of the old system. Their machinery would go to the junk pile and new machinery, made according to the metric scales, would have to be installed.

The rejection of the inch, the foot, the yard, the rod, the pound, the bushel, and the gallon would spread havoc, so to speak, in its wake. Of course, the Chinese merchants did, in some manner, get rid of the native standards of measurement when they acquired their love for the English tables. Conceivably, after a period of commercial hurly-burly, even the Chinese mind might become receptive of the metric notion. The scientific mind encompassed it at once, so that to-day even the Missouri druggist thinks in tenths. Whether or not the bulk of our imports comes into this country invoiced according to the metric system, it is a fact that its more accurate measurements are being everywhere adopted, if not by legislative fiat, at least by law of scientific exactness. Sooner or later the metric lion will emerge from the scientific laboratories into the marts of men and block the path of all Chinese-minded merchants—but metamorphosed, mayhap, into the seeming and reality of a lamb.

TEACHERS AT PLAYGROUNDS.

A serious situation confronts the Parks and Playgrounds Association. About forty teachers which it employs must be paid or dismissed for lack of funds. At the playgrounds alone the average daily attendance is over 7,000. This does not include the recreation piers, which are crowded, upward of 800 children gathering at a single pier during a Saturday afternoon. There are fifteen Guilds of Play in Manhattan and eleven in Brooklyn, dancing and games on six recreation piers, and exercises at many vacant lot and roof playgrounds. Shall the teachers be dismissed and the grounds closed?

Checks to support this good work may be sent to Miss PAULINE ROBINSON, Treasurer, Council of One Hundred, 42 West Thirty-seventh Street, this city.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

No Way to Begin Revolution.

Spanish is such a magnificent language for the dressing of lofty sentiments in sonorous phrases that every Spaniard with an education and not a few without one can undertake the task of proclaiming to the public either grievances or intentions, proudly confident of producing a document that will read extremely well. They do this just about as well in the Central and South American and West Indian republics as at home in Spain, and many a General and President of somewhat more than Iberian swarthiness has proved his ability to declare with no less elegance than eloquence how disinterested is his patriotism and how sound his politics.

It is strange, therefore, that the latest of Cuba's would-be regenerators—and rulers—Gen. ACEVEDO, should have failed so miserably in this sort of authorship when what he says is indignation and others hint is jealousy led him to denounce the Gomez administration. One may safely suspect that the translator is to blame for some of the faults in the General's proclamation as it comes to us by cable, but the translator can hardly be responsible for the fact that as a claim to public favor and support the General offers only a threat to the effect that if the Government does not relinquish its authority within fifteen days all the property on the island will be reduced to ashes.

What good, if any, that would do anybody is not obvious, and it would seem to be a greater misfortune than the continuance of President GOMEZ in office, even though all the stories of graft that are circulating in Cuba are true. As everybody who has been in Havana lately knows, those stories are numerous, and they are not vague or misty, but are told with a wealth of detail and a boldness in giving names that sooner or later convince the visiting foreigner of their veracity, at least in part.

While making his accusations, therefore, Gen. ACEVEDO is on what seems to be fairly firm ground, and it is not impossible that his "army," which some say is composed of five men and some of fifty, may soon be larger. It wouldn't have to be enormous to start a lot of fires in the cane fields, but that method of making war is now a little out of date in Cuba, and is not likely to render Gen. ACEVEDO a popular hero.

Bargained for a Brain.

A woman teacher in a Georgia school, according to not incredible report, has accepted from a Northern institution of medical research the price offered by it for her brain—after she is through with it, of course. This is an unusual, though not an unprecedented, business transaction, and whether it excites horror or approval in those who hear of it depends on their possession or lack of the scientific spirit.

The medical researchers want the teacher's brain partly because they find it so hard to get what may be called good brains, and partly because this particular brain is peculiar, not in any pathological way, but in enabling its present owner to perform wonderful feats at memory.

Postmaster General HITCHCOCK's opinion is that each separate class of mail matter should pay its way and no more. This undoubtedly makes a noise like business, a sound which, coming from a governmental department, is not the less harmonious to the ear because of its novelty. Pleasing, too, is Mr. HITCHCOCK's promise that if the postage on second-class mail be raised enough to bring in an income somewhere near the cost of carrying that class, letter postage can be reduced to 1 cent an ounce without disturbing the balance between revenues and expenditures, which is all the Post Office hopes for or ought to hope for.

As the Postmaster General admitted, however, mail matter that doesn't pay its way in money and directly, may bring in other returns of value sufficient to justify an apparent deficit as regards its particular class, and his own plan of making every class of mail self-supporting would, if logically carried out, take him much further than he cares to go. The present division into classes is arbitrary, and each of them could easily be divided into parts in one respect or another quite different enough to justify or demand different rates of postage.

Free rural delivery letters, for instance, are treated as in the category of first-class mail, and yet, instead of contributing anything to the big surplus that comes from first-class mail, they cut it down enormously from what it would be if the "F. R. D." had never been established or were to be abolished. To be logical, the Postmaster General ought to advise either the abolition of that service or an increase of its rates. He will do neither, and properly, for in spite of its huge deficit, the "F. R. D." does pay and pays well.

The fact is that a strict application in mail-carrying of the pay-its-own-way principle is impracticable and undesirable. This is recognized by the division of all mail matter into only four classes, though the number of divisions that might reasonably be made is almost infinite. That second-class privileges are abused is indubitable; that they could with propriety and advantage be somewhat restricted is highly probable; but lines will be extremely hard to draw, and most difficult of all would it be to draw one between news or literature, as such, and advertising, as such. That simply can't be done.

THE 1893 CHOLERA SCARE.

Former Health Officer Jenkins Makes a Correction.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE TIMES of July 23, in the Magazine Section, under the heading "How We Guard Against the Introduction of Cholera," appears the following statement:

> There was another scare in 1893. On Aug. 4 the Karamania arrived and reported three deaths from cholera on the voyage. The passengers were quarantined on Hoffman Island. The survivors were released on Aug. 24. There were 430 alive of the original list (of 471).

From this statement one would gather that at least 21 of the original passenger list of 471 of the Karamania died of cholera, and that 18 of these deaths occurred on Hoffman Island. On the contrary the facts are that the Karamania was the first of a cholera fleet of three ships which arrived Aug. 3, 1893, at 4:30 P. M., and reported three deaths from cholera. There were 468 passengers, three of the original list having died on the voyage. Workmen were at that time employed at Hoffman Island, and because of that reason it was impossible to remove the passengers to the Island for several days thereafter until the necessary preparations could be made. Pending their removal a case of cholera developed, as was shown by bacteriological examination, and the patient was sent to Swinburne Island. The remaining 467 passengers were sent to Hoffman Island. During their detention there twenty cases of cholera developed, of which four proved fatal. The other cases made a recovery, and finally 463 were discharged from Hoffman Island.

From these facts it will be seen that there were only seven deaths from cholera, including the three deaths on the voyage, instead of twenty-one cases, as is implied in your article. Also, 464 passengers were discharged as cured out of 471 instead of 450 out of 471, as stated in your article.

The Old English Church.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I venture to disagree with your correspondent, "J. Y. S.," who thinks the fact is a historical one that the English Church long before the time of Henry VIII. was not a part of the Roman Catholic Church. In the first place, "J. Y. S." forgets that Henry VIII. asked for and received a dispensation from the Pope to marry Catherine of Arragon, his deceased brother's wife, which shows that even he in his youth recognized the spiritual authority of "a tyrannical Bishop" over the English Church. Also, as for Saint Anselm and Bishop Fisher, whom Mr. Cram considers were members of the Church of England and not of the Roman Catholic Church, Bishop Fisher, we know, preferred death rather than admit that the Pope was not the spiritual head of the English Church, and Saint Anselm, not content to receive the Archbishopric of Canterbury from the King of England, went to Rome in order to secure the sanction of the Sovereign Pontiff.

These few and many other hundreds of examples only go to prove that the Pre-Reformation Church in England was a part of the great Church, one of whose attributes is its unity, and that the continuity of the Church of England is a problem which some of the master minds of the nineteenth century, such as John Henry Newman, Manning, &c., were unable to prove.

Littered Transit Stations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a frequent user of the New York Subway I wish to voice a protest against the unclean condition of some of the platforms and stairways of several of the stations, some of which are fairly littered with cigarette boxes, candy wrappers from vending machines, and other articles thrown away by the careless public. This condition is not only unsightly, but a menace to those who are obliged to use the Subway as a means of transportation. Only a short time ago at the Forty-second Street entrance, in your own Times Square, I saw a woman have a bad fall down the stairway by stepping upon a discarded cigar stump.

A Correction.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your paper of this morning I find an article on Page 2, sixth column, "Ejected from the Court; Dying in Hospital." I wish to express my sincere thanks to your paper for taking up the case as fully as you have.

I only wish to correct the statement in next to the last paragraph of the article, in which it says that I had entered the detention cells, which is not correct.

A DAILY READER.

A FALSE START IN SUBWAYS.

From The Journal of Commerce, Aug. 2.

An effort was made at something like a ceremony in starting the "digging" under the first contract for construction of the new subway in Lexington Avenue, which is to constitute a section of the ill-starred triborough system. It was entered upon with a certain confident gayety, and naturally drew a crowd, as any such beginning was sure to do, whether it was wisely made or not. If the work thus started is to go on unhindered it commits the city to a huge undertaking that is ill-advised and ill-devised, and will entail an immense cost and long delays in furnishing needed means of rapid transit, which could have been avoided if better counsels had prevailed. Mayor Gaynor, referring to the cost of Court House sites in the Counties of New York and Kings, said that "if private capital is not to share in the building of the subways, then many things will have to be left undone for years." Private capital might have shared in this work in pursuance of a far better plan than that finally adopted, and the Mayor did his part to prevent it.

This Lexington Avenue line, upon one section of which excavation has begun, is part of the triborough system which was designed as an independent rival to the part of a better system already established and leased from the city by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. It will cross its main line twice, but not connect with it at all. It will cost much more and serve the public much less effectively than would the extension of the existing system, according to the original design. It will have no help from private capital in construction, and the municipal debt limit will stand in the way of its rapid progress and early completion. When it is done, if it is done, it will in some parts duplicate the present system, and in others supplement it, but it will not afford the needed accommodation for a single fare.

Not only will many things be left undone for years in consequence of this mistake, but it will take years longer than would otherwise be required to provide the needed transit facilities and get the usufruct of the great expenditure. The city debt will crowd upon its limit, block other improvements, and hinder progress in this, in spite of lifting assessed values of real estate to increase taxes without soaking the payers with a higher rate. What was inaugurated on Lexington Avenue on Monday was the first step in executing a blunder, the consequences of which will appear after many days.

THE MAINE MEMORIAL.

Gen. Wilson Takes The Times to Task for Opposing its Location.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On Tuesday last there appeared in your columns an editorial article in relation to the Maine National Memorial now being erected at the Columbus Circle entrance of Central Park. If this had been a mere news item its inaccuracies might be overlooked, but an editorial article may be assumed to be a more responsible statement, and, as Chairman of the Committee on Site and Design of the Maine National Memorial, I wish to draw your attention to three points.

First, the injustice of your statement that the Maine Memorial will be a "cheap disfigurement." Inquiries at the offices of the architect and of the Art Commission of the City of New York disclose the fact that no representative of THE TIMES has ever inspected the model of the memorial or photographs of it. It may fairly be assumed, then, that the person who wrote the article referred to had never seen the design. It may be of interest to you to know that the design of this memorial was selected in competition by judges eminent in the artistic profession from among sixty or seventy submitted.

Second, in connection with the above and also in connection with the statement in the article that the memorial will be "incongruously near the Columbus Monument," I would point out to you that the Art Commission of the City of New York is charged with the duty of deciding upon the character and location of all monuments erected in the City of New York. The fact that it gave the design and the present location of this memorial its approval should be sufficient evidence to the public that it will be neither a "disfigurement" nor "incongruously near the Columbus Monument." And whether a member of your staff had inspected the design or not, his opinion can have no weight whatever as compared with the deliberate judgment of a body like the Art Commission, which gave every aspect of the case the fullest and most careful consideration during a period of several weeks.

Third, your statement that Park Commissioner Stover has repealed a section of the City Charter, in that the Park Board has not had the benefit of a skilled and expert adviser, whose assent shall be requisite to changes in the ornamentation of Central Park and Columbus Circle, since Landscape Architect Parsons's services were dispensed with, is untrue in relation to the matter under discussion. It is a mere matter of fact which you could easily have determined and can now easily verify that Mr. Parsons while landscape architect of the Park Department not only approved of the location of the memorial but also approved of the removal of the trees of which you have complained during a series of articles and letters in the course of the past few weeks.

I would request that you give this letter prominence equal to that of the editorial article to which I refer.

JAMES GRANT WILSON.

Lake Minnewaska, N. Y., July 28, 1911.

1. The architectural and artistic quality of the memorial has nothing to do with the case. If Phidias, Praxiteles, and Benvenuto Cellini had co-operated in its design and making, it would still have been a cheap disfigurement of Central Park, cheap when compared in value with what it displaces. It was not at all necessary that we should inspect the model of the memorial; we have seen the spot that is being cleared and devasted to receive it. One good tree in Central Park is worth more, where it stands, to the people of the city than any "storied urn or animated bust" ever shaped by the hand of man. Central Park needs no more monuments or statues; at least, if one must be placed there two should be removed.

2. It is true that the Art Commission did approve the placing of this memorial at the entrance to the Park. But at least one member of the commision regrets that decision. Does Gen. Wilson believe, if the matter were to come up afresh, that the Art Commision would now give its sanction to the placing of the Maine memorial in Central Park?

3. Mr. Samuel Parsons, while landscape architect of the Park, did reluctantly assent to the placing of the memorial at the spot chosen. But he is on record as disapproving the design of the memorial itself, because it was his judgment that the structure would be out of harmony with its surroundings.—[Editor THE TIMES.

Grant's Tomb.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In re the Lincoln memorial I am decidedly in favor of free-for-all competition, but not, if as Isidor Konti writes in Tuesday's TIMES, that monumental monstrosity, Grant's Tomb, was one result of such competition. But was it? Will some one who knows something about the inside relations of art and politics in New York City please come forward with a few of the facts concerning the award of that work for the enlightenment of Mr. Konti?

INCREASED EFFICIENCY.

We've got the new Lost Motion craze;
Increased efficiency
Is now the watchword here at home, and all of us agree
It strikes the root of household care; you'd not believe the cost
Of wasted effort in the home or how much can be lost.
The breakfast wrapper Mother wore is in the discard now;
The old-time wrinkles do not mar the smoothness of her brow;
By making every motion count, efficiency's real test,
She breakfasts now in full coiffure and quite completely dressed.

Then Father comes down neatly shaved, with no scars on his face—
A cut is a lost motion, quite, and that would be disgrace;
Where once he used to run like mad to catch the car to town
He now has quite the half an hour to rest and sit him down.
The lawn needs cutting—presto, look! No fairer work you'll see,
He cuts it while he reads a book—increased efficiency;
And while he mows, with motions lost in other days he turns
Out half a cord of kitchen wood, makes the ice cream, and churns.

The maid is quite another girl. You'd scarce think the amount
Of work she does by learning how to make each motion count.
By breakfast time this morning she had mopped down all the walls,
Done the week's wash, made a new dress and half a dozen calls.
By nine o'clock the whole day's work was finished—she was through
And might have sat the livelong day with nothing else to do,
But much preferred to paint the house, dig a new well and build
A new garage so that her day might seem to be well filled.

Come, laden souls and care oppressed, whose work is never done,
Learn how the day's hard work is o'er before it has begun.
See Father, gone to town at six; see Mother, off in haste
To speak to the Lost Motion Club on "Friction and Its Waste."
Learn how to knead the bread and churn and scrub the kitchen floor
By saving half the motion that you used to lose before;
Come, join the onward march of Toil, from slavish tasks set free,
Form a Lost Motion Club and teach Increased Efficiency.

Can't Survive Any Increase in Postal Rates, Hughes Commission Is Told.

MAGAZINE MEN'S ATTACK.

Declare Post Office Department Figures Do Not Do Justice to the Second-Class Mail.

It soon became evident yesterday, at the second hearing of the commission, headed by Associate Justice Charles E. Hughes of the United States Supreme Court, to inquire into the handling of second-class mail matter, that the magazine publishers intend to make a plea for justice, not for mercy, from the Government.

Second Assistant Postmaster General Joseph Stewart was on the stand all the morning and half the afternoon, under a fire of questions from Lawyers Herbert Noble and James B. Sheehan, representing the publishers of seventeen leading magazines of the country. The entire line of interrogation by the lawyers was directed with the evident purpose of forcing Mr. Stewart to admit that expenditures for the handling of all the mail had been charged up against second-class matter in undue proportion, that allowances for such advantage as accrued to the Post Office Department through the handling of second-class matter had not been credited in the statement made to the commission on Tuesday by the Post Office Department officials, and that some such advantages apparently had been overlooked altogether.

While the line of inquiry pursued by the magazine publishers' lawyers was regarded as particularly important, since it disclosed the character of fight they purpose to make against the recommendation that the second-class postage rate be doubled—that is, raised on all newspapers and magazines from one to two cents a pound—the most interesting feature of the day to many was a special plea by H. H. Graham of Chicago, representing the Methodist Book Concern, with large publication houses in this city and Cincinnati. Justice Hughes was plainly greatly interested in Mr. Graham's statement, which included a positive assertion that if the second-class postage rate was doubled, as the Postmaster General proposed, several of the religious publications now conducted by the Methodist Book Concern would be put out of business.

Mr. Graham explained that the Methodist Book Concern had about twenty publications altogether, including chiefly the Western Christian Advocate and a number of Sunday school lesson magazines. He said no one owned a dollar of stock in the concern, but that the Methodist Church itself owned the house and its publications, and after the expenses were paid, what was left went to support superannuated Methodist ministers, or their widows and dependent children.

"Now," he said, "many of these publications are already conducted at some loss because they are believed of great spiritual help to members of the Church who need their church papers and the Sunday school lessons. The deficits where they occur, are made up from the returns from publications on which there is a profit. The increase of the postage rate by even so much as a quarter of a cent would be a burden on some of these publications, and the doubling of that rate would certainly put several of them out of business altogether."

"You are certain that the increased rate would cause some of the publications to suspend?" asked Justice Hughes.

"I am sure of it," was Mr. Graham's reply.

"Well," pursued the Chairman of the commission, "name one which you are convinced would have to suspend."

"The Western Christian Advocate," Mr. Graham said. He added that the Western Christian Advocate was now published at a loss, and could not be continued if its burdens were increased. It was now issued in spite of the loss, he explained, because the Church regarded it as necessary for keeping members of the Church informed of its activities.

Justice Hughes here turned his attention to an inquiry as to what would be done for the superannuated ministers or their widows in the event that the Methodist Book Concern, owing to an increase in the postal rates, did not make as much money as it did now.

"Would not that difference be made up, and have to be made up, by the members of the Methodist Church?" Justice Hughes asked.

Mr. Graham replied that it would.

"Well," pursued Justice Hughes, "if it is shown that the proposed increase in postage rate is fair, and that the present rate is not sufficient to pay the cost of handling, you would be willing to accept any necessary increase, wouldn't you? You wouldn't want the people of the United States generally to help support the superannuated ministers, would you? You would want the additional sum needed furnished by the members of the Methodist Church, would you not?"

Justice Hughes asked the questions in high good humor, and his manner was half bantering, half earnest, and Mr. Graham replied in the same spirit.

"I would say," he declared, "that members of the Church and the Government, should meet [illegible] like to say also that [illegible] much to uplift citizens [illegible] country, and it is their [illegible] are trying to do a work in which the Government is greatly interested, and no objection would be made by the Church if the Government helped it along a little."

President Lowell of Harvard and Mr. Wheeler of Chicago also united in the interrogation of Mr. Graham, as they did also Mr. Stewart.

Mr. Noble, in the cross-examination of both Mr. Stewart and Third Assistant Postmaster General Britt, had them explain the meaning of the terminology used in their official statements to the commission. Mr. Stewart explained that "fully made up mail" was that wherein the publishers themselves filled the pouches, which were sent on to their destination without handling by the postal employes at all except by the local men at the point of final distribution. "Partly made up mail" was that which was made up by the publishers and forwarded to both intermediate and final points of distribution, but requiring at least some separation in the railway mail service. Using these definitions, Mr. Noble sought to show that the Post Office Department in making its estimate of the cost of handling second-class mail had failed to give sufficient credit to the amount of time, labor and expense saved the department by the publishers in wholly or partly making up their own mail, and, on the other hand, had charged the whole of certain carrying and handling expenses against second-class matter when only a part of such charge was just.

Mr. Noble tried to get Mr. Stewart to admit that whereas first-class matter was handled and rehandled more than second-class mail the latter had been charged up with the greater rehandling. Mr. Stewart insisted, however, that in spite of the making up of the mail by the publishers second-class matter required the greater handling. Mr. Noble and Mr. Sheehan seemed much surprised at this and would not be convinced that it was so. A railway mail service expert will be called in this matter. With Mr. Stewart still on the stand the hearing will be resumed this morning.

Women Beggars.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why is it that there are so many women begging in the financial district? Every morning you will find one at the corner of Broadway and Rector Street, with a child in her arms; another in Nassau Street, outside the Sub-Treasury, and an old woman walking up and down Broad Street selling [illegible]. Are there no institutions in the city [illegible] take care of these unfortunates?

CORT HAS NEW PLAYS FOR NEW YORK SEASON

"The Fox," a Detective Drama, in September, with "Sadie" and "Jingaboo" in October.

LAWRANCE D'ORSAY'S TOUR

Mrs. Leslie Carter to Tour in "Two Women" and May Come Into New York Later in the Season.

John Cort, in announcing some of his producing plans yesterday, promised at least three new productions for New York this season. He will also have Lawrance D'Orsay under his management, and again will direct the tour of Mrs. Leslie Carter.

Mrs. Carter will continue in "Two Women," the drama by Rupert Hughes in which she appeared last year, for the first months of the season, and probably come into New York after the holidays in a new play that Mr. Cort has in preparation for her. Mr. D'Orsay will begin his tour in his old Augustus Thomas comedy, "The Earl of Pawtucket," at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto, early in September, and will play westward through the Canadian provinces to the Pacific Coast.

The first new play to be put on by Mr. Cort will be "Sadie," a comedy drama by Rupert Hughes, dramatized from Karl Harriman's novel of the same title. This play, which will have its premier in October, will have in its cast Theodore Roberts, Thurlow Bergen, Frank Campeau, Ernest Warde, Franklin Roberts, and Fernanda Elison.

"Jingaboo," a musical farce, book by Leo Ditrichstein, lyrics by Vincent Bryan, and music by Arthur Pryor, is another production promised by Cort for October. "The Fox," Lee Arthur's detective play, which was presented out of town last Spring, will have a New York performance early in September. Mr. Cort is arranging also for three new operas to be presented this Winter.

NEW ORCHESTRA ORGANIZED.

Prominent Musicians Unite to Improve Popular Taste for Classic Music.

As a result of the movement to carry the classic drama and classic music to people of the crowded sections of the city by means of the public schools a new orchestra, composed chiefly of those musicians who have interested themselves in the public theatre project, has now been organized.

The new orchestra is called the Commonwealth Symphony. It is composed of 80 charter member musicians and 100 associate members. They have selected Julius Hopp, who is manager both of the Wage Earners' Theatre League and the Theatre Centre for Schools, managing director of the new organization. Bernard Jarow, Arthur Erber, Emil Heimberger, William Altmuller, and William Fischer are among the charter members, with Mr. Jarow as one of the leading spirits among the musicians. The purpose of the organization is to give in a short while public concerts of a high order in various sections of the city with the hope of cultivating a keener taste for classic music.

Miss Russell Must Press Her Suit.

Supreme Court Justice Brady, in denying yesterday the motion of Lee Shubert to dismiss a suit brought against him for $50,000 by Lillian Russell, ruled that the case must bring her suit to trial before Oct. 1 or the motion to dismiss may be renewed. Miss Russell brought the suit in 1909 for services rendered in the opera "Lady Teazle." Alfred Lauterbach was her attorney when the suit was begun. He was killed some time after it had been begun. Her present counsel, Louis Fraenkel, said that Miss Russell had been on the road with her company most of the time since then, and that through misunderstanding he had not pressed the case.

Special to The New York Times.

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 2.—The body of Miss Lillian Sawin of Mount Vernon, who was drowned with her sweetheart, Lorimer Denike, on Tuesday night, July 25, was found this afternoon by James Ferris, between Parsonage Point and Pine Island. Ferris was rowing out to go fishing when his blades struck the body. He brought it ashore and notified the police, who in turn notified the parents of the young woman.

Denike and his companion went out on a pleasure sail in the boat Jigger, and the last seen of them they were becalmed in the middle of the Sound. The Jigger was picked up on the following day by Capt. P. A. Lanson of the schooner C. A. Netleton and on the 27th the body of Denike was found at Sea Cliff.

Miss Sawin was nineteen years old, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Sawin of 419 South Fourth Avenue, Mount Vernon. The young couple were soon to be married.

COL. ASTOR SAILS AWAY.

Takes Fiancee and Her Mother on His Yacht to Newport.

Col. John Jacob Astor left New York on his steam yacht Noma yesterday afternoon for Newport. Among his guests on board were Miss Madeleine Talmage Force, his fiancee, and her mother, Mrs. William H. Force, who will be at Newport until after the yacht races on Aug. 10.

Following the formal announcement of Miss Force's engagement to Col. Astor on Tuesday, both Miss Force and the Colonel have received many telegrams of felicitation and flowers. Flowers were left at Beechwood, the Astor villa at Newport, yesterday by many of his friends. Many boxes of them were received at the Force home, 18 East Thirty-seventh Street.

It was about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon when Col. Astor and his guests arrived at the pier of the New York Yacht Club at the foot of East Twenty-third Street. A signal was sent to the yacht for a launch. Miss Force wore a costume of pink lingerie and blue hat. While the party waited for the launch Col. Astor replied to the battery of questions that were fired at him.

"Have you decided upon the date of the wedding?" was the first inquiry.

"The matter has been discussed," he replied, "but no date has been fixed. At present it looks as though the marriage would take place in the Fall. It may happen sooner."

As soon as the party boarded the Noma the anchor was hoisted and the yacht nosed her way up the river for Long Island Sound and Newport.

Body Rests Beside That of His Distinguished Father—Memorial Exercises in the Fall.

Many men of prominence in various walks of life attended yesterday morning the funeral services for Edward Morse Shepard, held in the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, Clinton and Montague Streets, Brooklyn. The Brooklyn courts were adjourned for an hour out of respect to the memory of Mr. Shepard, all the Justices who were in town attending the funeral. The services were conducted by the rector of the church, the Rev. Dr. John Howard Melish, assisted by the Rev. E. M. Waldo Adams Moss, assistant rector of that church. The casket containing the body, which was brought down from Lake George on Tuesday night and placed in the church, lay under a pall of lilies and purple asters. The music was under the direction of Samuel A. Baldwin, musical director of the City College. The pallbearers were George Foster Peabody, Henry F. Chapman, A. Augustus Healy, Theodore F. Miller, John H. Finley, and Francis Lynde Stetson. Charles Jerome Edwards and William H. Smith were the special ushers.

FINES AUTOISTS BY MAIL.

Grand Jury to Investigate New Jersey Justice's Methods.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 2.—Prosecutor Goldenberg has threatened to refer to the Grand Jury the action of Justice of the Peace Joseph Weeks of Pleasantville in fining automobilists on charges of violation of the speed laws without the formality of a hearing. Justice Weeks has sent letters to several motorists telling them they had broken the speed laws and had been fined, and advising them to appear before him and pay to avoid further trouble.

He wrote a letter of this character to Walter E. Reed, a realty broker of this city, saying he broke the speed laws on July 30. Reed appeared in response to the letter and told the Justice that it raised that day and his car was not out. Justice Weeks was angry, and said he would not have set down that date if he had not known what he was about. He reduced Reed's fine $5, however, as a compromise.

Reed's driver, a few days later, told the Justice he had made a mistake, and they had a heated argument, which resulted in Weeks issuing his own warrant on his own complaint for the driver's arrest. He held the driver under $400 bail to keep the peace. The driver refused to pay the costs imposed.

Mr. Reed laid the matter before Prosecutor Goldenberg, who recalled Justice Weeks by telephone, told him he was exceeding his authority, and that he would refer the matter to the Grand Jury. Complaint by Mr. Reed will also be lodged against Weeks with the Motor Vehicle Department of the State.

5,000,000 PEOPLE HERE NOW.

Growth of the City Since the Census a Year Ago is 233,524.

According to the estimate of the Health Department, the population of New York City Aug. 3, 1911, is 5,000,407. This is a gain of 233,524 in the last year.

The official figures of the United States census, which was taken in April, 1910, showed that New York, with its five boroughs, had a population of 4,766,883. The population of the city on July 1, 1908, was 3,272,418, which shows by a comparison with the total for this year a gain of 53 per cent. for the period of thirteen years.

The greatest gains have been in Manhattan Borough, the population of which is now given as 2,368,636. The Bronx has a population of 487,437, which is also a large increase in numbers for that section. Brooklyn has a total of 1,719,852, Queens has 312,680, and Richmond 85,852.

With the increase of population in the last thirteen years there has been at the same time a falling off in the death rate. The Health Department asserts that the death rate for the week ended last Saturday was 14.10 to 1,000 inhabitants. It is pointed out that this is 1 per cent. lower than the lowest record of the last thirteen years. The infant mortality for children less than one year of age was 156 in 1,000, as against 235 in 1,000 for the corresponding week in 1910.

WHOLESALE PRICES DOWN.

Housekeepers May Find Comfort in a Study of Bank Figures.

Housekeepers who have been bewailing the advance in the price of provisions may find comfor tin the analysis of the situation which the Fourth National Bank has made in its monthly summary of the business outlook, just issued.

Taking the drop in the price of cotton as his text, the writer goes into figures which have interest for the layman. He says:

"Compared with the prices obtained a year ago, cotton has now declined more than 2 cents a pound in that interval, wheat 8 cents a bushel, corn about 5 cents a bushel, oats 3 cents a bushel, and flour $1 a barrel. Other reductions have been $8 for pork, $4 for lard, and nearly $7 for family beef. These reductions are typical of the general tendency, the prices being based upon the prevailing quotations in the New York market."

EMPLOY GIRLS NO MORE.

Southern Pacific Officials Say They Get Married When Most Needed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2.—The Southern Pacific, beginning this month, is putting into effect a rule that hereafter no women are to be employed as clerks or stenographers in the company's passenger department.

Officials of the company assign as reasons for this action the tendency of the girls to marry just when they are becoming of great service, and the physical incapacity which unfits them for advancement.

Miss Prentice to Wed S. W. Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. William Packer Prentice of 9 West Sixteenth Street, who are spending the Summer at Princeton, N. J., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Arietta Hope Prentice, to Stephen Willets Collins of this city. Mr. Collins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Collins of 117 East Sixty-first Street, and is a lawyer with offices at 63 Wall Street. He is a member of the Union League, Whist, Apawamis, Golf and Badminton Clubs. No date has been set for the wedding.

CULHANE—KENEDY.

Robert Joseph Culhane and Miss Lauretta Anna Kenedy were married at 10 o'clock yesterday morning at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, Seventy-first Street and Broadway. Only near relatives of the bride and bridegroom witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Matthew A. Taylor, pastor of the church.

The bride wore a gown of white chiffon cloth over white satin, a large picture hat trimmed with white plumes, and carried a bouquet of white orchids. GIRL'S BODY IN THE HUDSON.

May Have Fallen from a River Boat—Handkerchief Marked "A."

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 2.—The engineer of a train passing through here at 10:21 o'clock this morning saw a body floating in the Hudson River and notified George Vincent, station agent at Irvington. Vincent, with Chief of Police Howley, walked down the track and got the body ashore.

It was that of a girl about 21 years old, with light brown hair and eyebrows, gray eyes, and weighing about 125 pounds. She was about 5 feet 7 inches in height. She wore a blue and white one-piece dress, black lace stockings, and pumps bought in a shoe shop in Sixth Avenue, New York City.

There were bruises on the girl's neck, but Coroner Iles said these had been caused by contact with rocks along the river bank. The Coroner has not ordered an autopsy, and will not unless there are other developments in the case, as he is certain that the girl was drowned, and that her body had not been in the water more than twelve hours.

How the girl died is a mystery. It is possible that she may have committed suicide, for Sergt. Brady of Irvington saw a girl walk up the railroad tracks from Irvington at 7:30 o'clock last night. This girl wore a hat and carried a bag, neither of which were found, but Brady failed to notice her dress. The Coroner believes that the girl fell from a river steamer or from a small boat.

There is no clue to her identity beyond a man's handkerchief marked with the initial "A," and the scraps of an envelope which were found inside her waist. The envelope was stamped at Station H in Manhattan at 11:30 P. M., July 29. The only writing that could be deciphered were the initials "A. E." and the word "city."

LAWYER SAVES GIRL IN SOUND

Miss Doern, Learning to Swim, Lost Grasp on Water Wings.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Aug. 2.—Miss Catherine Doern, daughter of Peter Doern, a wealthy contractor, was saved from drowning to-day by Alexander L. Anderson, a young lawyer. Miss Doern was learning to swim on water wings with her sister Regina off the rocks of Hudson Park, and Anderson, with several other young men of their acquaintance, were sitting on the shore.

Catherine slipped from her water wings and sank. Her sister made frantic efforts to save her, but was being dragged down. Mr. Anderson, who was fully dressed, sprang into the water and swam to the drowning girl, bringing her ashore. Her sister was so frightened that she could not swim, and could only cling to her water wings. Anderson swam back for her.

FIGHTS RESCUER IN RIVER.

Passengers on Ferryboat Cheer Tug Captain's Struggle for a Life.

John Cranford, a driver, 33 years old, of 229 Driggs Avenue, Williamburg, fell from a stringpiece at the foot of North First Street, Williamsburg, yesterday. His head struck a submerged log, and he was stunned.

Cranford was struggling feebly when Capt. Henry Bloom of the lighter Bridgeport threw off his coat and plunged in. Cranford caught Capt. Bloom around the neck, and both men were drawn beneath the surface. The tide carried the two men into the path of the ferryboat James Waterbury of the Houston Street Line. The passengers crowded to the rail watching the struggle.

Capt. Bloom finally struck Cranford on the jaw, breaking his hold. It required another hard fight to reach a pier. Capt. Bloom was cheered by the passengers.

CARNEGIE PARTNER DEAD.

Major Phipps Had Long Been a Recluse, Fearing the Black Hand.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 2.—Major A. W. Phipps, eccentric, wealthy, and one of Andrew Carnegie's early partners in the steel business in Pittsburg, died suddenly to-day in his suite in the Van Nuy's Hotel, which he had occupied for the last eight years, and from which he had never ventured in that time. By his death his wife, many years his junior, is released from a virtual prison, for Major Phipps never let her leave their apartments.

Ten years ago Major Phipps came to Southern California and purchased a beautiful ranch, on which he built an extensive and palatial home. Two years later he suddenly abandoned the ranch and came to Los Angeles to live. He was obsessed with the idea that the Black Hand men were after him, and numerous incidents at the hotel have shown how far his fear carried him. A short time ago a Japanese window cleaner appeared suddenly outside his window on the ledge. Terror-stricken Major Phipps rushed from the room into another part of his suite, and was ill for several days as the result of the fright.

Major Phipps held large blocks of steel stock and owned considerable realty here and in the East. In his office, a part of his suite, he met his attorneys and other business men and transacted his business keenly.

In early life he was a reporter, and became a friend of Carnegie, who directed his energies and small investment until he amassed a fortune. He was 63 years old.

Umpires—Messrs. Mullin and O'Loughlin. Time of game—Two hours and sixteen minutes.

The Naps and the Yankees spent two hours and sixteen minutes on the hilltop yesterday trying to hand each other the first game of the present series, and the Yankees' efforts were crowned with success. It required hard work on the part of Chase's men, as the Naps were unusually generous and insisted on handing back every advantage which they picked up for eight innings. In the ninth, after coming from behind far enough to establish a three-run lead, the Naps presented the Yankees with a layout of such proportions that a solid slam would bring victory and an ordinary single a tie score, but the Yanks refused to embrace the opportunity. When the curtain was rung down the Naps were in front, 10 to 8.

The game was full of excitement, but it was not the kind that is the result of good baseball. Both teams fielded like a troupe of nervous schoolboys, and the four pitchers who essayed to do the moundwork did their work about as well as their mates performed in the field. Olson and Ball had a busy time trying to glue their fingers to Yankee smashes, and managed to turn in five glossy miscues, but the hilltop infield was equally bad. Earl Gardner, the usually reliable second sacker of the Chase crew, tied Olson for the top figure in the error column with three glaring blunders, and Jack Knight, at third refused to be crowded out by Neal Ball, who erred twice. All told the two teams made a dozen misplays in nine innings, quite a performance by players of major league calibre.

It was a roseate chance that slipped through the Yankees' fingers in their half of the ninth inning. They came to bat three runs in the rear, after the Naps had scored four times by a great exhibition of bunch hitting, and in less than two minutes they were confronted with a fine opportunity to jump back again on even terms or grab the victory. Two were out and Magner on first base as the result of an infield hit before the shining opportunity developed. Sweeney beat out a scratch hit, and Home-Run Johnson was pressed into service as an emergency hitter for Quinn. The stocky Swede has been known to break up games in the past by leaning the ash against the leather for circuit sprints, and here was the opening all properly arranged for such a hit. Otey was implored to ride the pill in the bleachers and tie the score, but he didn't get the chance. With the count 3 and 2 against him, Blanding sent up a wide one, and Otey ambled to first base, filling the corners. Caldwell, used in the outfield because of his hitting abilities, had failed to deliver a bingle in his five previous trips to the plate, but on this occasion he was there, and a sharp smash between Ball and Olson chased Magner home. The corners were still covered when Hal Chase faced Blanding, and only a single was needed to put the Yankees back in the fight. But Chase was too anxious. He took a hard swing at the first ball pitched, sent an easy roller to Blanding, and the latter tossed the ball to Stovall, ending the threatened rally.

Errors figured prominently in most of the runs scored up to the ninth inning. The Naps scored in the first inning on Graney's single, a sacrifice, an infield out, and Knight's error on Lajoie's grounder. Turner's single, a fielder's choice, and Krapp's double scored another Cleveland run in the second. Still another lonesome count was chalked up in the third on Lajoie's triple to centre and Ball's sharp drive over second base. Gardner's fumble put Jackson on first in the fifth inning, and Joe completed the circuit on Lajoie's sacrifice and Ball's drive to left field. In the seventh inning the visitors picked up a brace of runs on a single by Olson and Jackson, helped along by errors on the part of Gardner and Knight.

In the ninth the Naps got after Quinn with a vengeance and chased in four runs on five hits. Olson singled to centre and scored on Jackson's triple to centre. Lajoie's single to left pushed Jackson across. Mills ran for Lajoie and reached third on Birmingham's double, after Ball fanned. Turner's single to centre scored Mills and Birmingham.

Singles by Chase and Cree, a pass to Hemphill, errors by Ball and Olson, and a wild pitch made up the collection which gave the Yankees two runs in the first inning. They got three more in the fifth without getting a hit. In this chapter Hartzell, batting for Fisher, and Magner drew passes. Ball and Olson contributed another brace of errors. Krapp uncorked a wild pitch and Gus Fisher favored with a passed ball. A pass to Sweeney, Krapp's fourth wild pitch of the game, and Quinn's single to left sent in the Yankees' sixth run in the sixth inning. Errors by Olson, Graney, and Blanding made another run possible in the eighth inning. Two singles and two passes helped to the last run, which came in the ninth inning.

Detroit Strikes Hard Snag.

BOSTON, Aug. 2.—Boston outplayed Detroit to-day, taking two games, 7 to 3 and 8 to 2. Three runs on bases, with none out and an unarmed pitcher in the box, was the situation which faced Ty Cobb when he stepped to the bat in the ninth. But he fell, going out on strikes. Sam Crawford also struck out and Veach popped out. Hall, who had succeeded Pape was the pitcher. The biggest crowd of the season saw the games. Scores:

PITTSBURG, Aug. 2.—Mathewson stood up grandly to-day for nine innings under a terrific Pirate cannonading, but baseball brains and dash had to tell in the end and he won his game.

Flashy and heady work on the bases and brilliant work afield offset the slugging of the Corsairs, who hammered Matty for fifteen hits, on which they obtained only fifteen bases, not a Pittsburger negotiating more than one bag for each bingle.

"Babe" Adams was driven to cover after two bad innings. Flushed with thirteen consecutive victories at the expense of the lowly Dodgers and the downtrodden Rustlers, the Pirates slipped up in the first two innings under a real test, and the result was five Giant runs, a big wide margin that tided Matty safely over the shoals of the succeeding seven innings.

The Giants hit Adams hard and wretched fielding turned five of their clouts into runs. The 1909 world's series conqueror seemed to become unsteadied by the big leaks sprung in the defense, and he was going from bad to worse when Clarke trotted out Elmer Steele in the second inning. The enemy fought hard from that time on, finding Matty for safeties with regularity, but the verdict stood for the Giants from the second inning until the finish.

Four flashy double plays helped Matty out of some bad pinches. Timely hitting and the keenest kind of base-running featured the work of the Giants throughout. They put up the same kind of a front as they have shown Pittsburg all season with the result that McGraw's men have won nine out of twelve games from the Smoky City crew this year.

More than 10,000 fans saw the opener of the series, which was played in a high wind that bordered on a gale. The Giants took the lead in the first inning. After Devore had flied to Wagner, Doyle hit to centre field for three bases. Snodgrass walked. Becker flied to Gibson. When Snodgrass started for second Gibson threw over Byrne's head in his attempt to catch Doyle. Larry tallied and Snodgrass took third base. Merkle tripled, scoring Snodgrass, but Fred was nailed at the plate. Singles by Leach, Carey and Wagner gave the Pirates a run in their half of the first inning.

The Giants came back in the second inning and annexed three more runs. Herzog opened with a single to centre and Fletcher also landed a safety. Herzog was forced at third base by Meyers. Matty singled to left field, but Carey let the ball go between his legs and Fletcher and Meyers scored. Matty taking third. Devore singled, scoring Matty. Here Clarke flashed the C. Q. D. for Steele and Adams was sent to the bench. The Giants did no more scoring in that inning.

Pittsburg scored a run in the third inning on Doyle's fumble of Byrne's grounder. Leach's single, Carey's sacrifice and Wagner's single that scored Byrne. Leach was nailed at the plate on Becker's long throw. They scored another run in the sixth inning on Wagner's single, Miller's out and Flynn's single.

Devore's double, Doyle's out at first base and a single by Snodgrass gave the Giants another run in the seventh inning. They rubbed it in on the Corsairs again in the ninth inning with two more runs. Fletcher opened the closing chapter with a double to left field. He scored on Meyer's single. Devore flied to Leach. Doyle made his second triple, scoring Meyers.

On singles by Miller, Flynn and Clarke, the latter batting in a pinch, Pittsburg put their fourth run across in the ninth inning, but they went no further.

Graduate Coach for Yale Nine.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 2.—Baseball will be the next sport at Yale to come under the graduate coaching system, according to announcement by Yale athletic advisers, and it is said that the action taken this year in connection with the crew will be followed by a movement to mold next year's baseball team at the university through a system entirely amateur. Walter Camp, Yale graduate advisory coach, has admitted in an interview that not only baseball but probably the entire coaching system at Yale may be affected. Mr. Camp declined to discuss what effect such a change would have on the present professional coaches.

Pitched 75 Balls in One Game.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 2.—It was declared here last night by baseball reporters that "Flame" Delhi, premier pitcher of the Los Angeles Pacific Coast League team, had established a new world's record in the game Sunday with Portland, Delhi pitched only seventy-five balls for the nine innings, as against the old record of 79, by Ida Fitz Inzius. He pitched just four balls and in the second five his control throughout was perfect. Delhi goes to the Chicago Americans next year.

ONE HIT OFF KING COLE.

Archer's Home Run in Tenth Wins Game from Brooklyn.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—Six thousand fans saw "Old King" Cole shut out "Wild Bill" Dahlen's Brooklyn team to-day, allowing it a single hit, while the Cubs won the game, after an extra-inning battle, by a score of 1 to 0. It was one of the greatest pitching battles ever seen on the West Side. Nap Rucker, who pitched for Brooklyn, also was in grand form, and the hitting off his delivery during the regular nine innings was scattered. He only allowed three singles in that time, Saier, Schulte, and Zimmerman being the fortunate ones, but none of the three hits, and Zimerman's was a double, with no one out, could be converted into a tally.

It was Jimmie Archer who won the game. Rucker had the Cub catcher "three and two" in the opening of the tenth inning, and then James laid on tons of Rucker's sweeping curves so hard that the pill pulled up in the right-field bleachers. It was a sensational finish to a great pitching battle.

It was not only a great game from the standpoint of the twirlers, but it was replete with great fielding. The only error was recorded when Cole messed about with Daubert's bunt in the fourth inning, and gave him a life. Behind Cole every player on the Cub line played fast baseball, corralling almost impossible chances, while Rucker was fortunate in getting the best possible support. The score:

TENNIS STARS PLAY FOR NEW YORK TITLE

Long, Hackett, and Inman Notable Victors for State Championship at Bay Ridge.

Attention centred upon a trio of famous lawn tennis experts, Melville H. Long of California, Harold H. Hackett, the National doubles champion, and Frederick C. Inman, the playing through holder of the title yesterday, at the beginning of the New York State championship tournament on the turf courts of the Crescent Athletic Club at Bay Ridge. Out of the big draw of eighty-eight contestants, which is seven more than last year, the three men loomed large in their playing, although there was an abundance of class at work upon the courts.

Long, because of his unusually good performances earlier in the year, held the place of honor upon the grand stand court. He faced L. du Pont Irving, a former Harvard crack, whom Long disposed of to the score of 6—1, 6—2. Since his appearance here two seasons ago Long has greatly improved. There is more deliberation in his work and not so much of the reckless, head-long dash. He is fast, as all of the Californians are, but with it has come steadiness. Long's service in which the second ball was as fast as the first was effective. He played from deep court against Irving. The drives came off with wonderful rapidity, and he sent the ball cleanly to the lines. Only once, in the sixth game, did Long go to the net. Then he essayed a smash of Irving's short lob. It was a vicious stroke which missed fire as the ball landed in the net, and Long narrowly escaped breaking his racquet. Irving won that game, which was the only one he gained in the first set. Long led in the second set at 4—1 and 5—2, winning rather easily.

Harold H. Hackett's appearance in the singles was hailed with great rejoicing by some of the older players. He was at his old tricks of finding the openings along the sides of the court, so that he defeated Robert W. Seabury, 6—2, 6—2. It is two years since Hackett has competed in an important open tournament. There was slittering brilliancy, yesterday about his game, showing that the veteran had lost nothing of his former skill. The soft, pattering service often baffled Seabury, while the National champion's ability to force openings kept him in the lead all the way to the end.

Inman engaged in two matches, advancing into the third round. He was very rapid in the execution of his shots. The champion holder in his first match defeated T. D. Bishop, 6—1, 6—love; following with the defeat of John C. Tomlinson, Jr., at 6—1, 6—4. While opposed by players only capable of making a fair defense against him, it was evident from the manner in which Inman handled himself that he will have to be reckoned with in this tournament. When he speeded up his game his work was amazing, while at all times his accuracy was deadly either overhead or off the ground.

Among the other noteworthy matches was the victory of Edward H. Whitney of Harvard, who defeated R. Marcy, 6—1, 6—0. Then the Columbia interscholastic champion, W. M. Washburn, defeated A. Fox 6—2, 6—1, and George M. Church, the Princeton interscholastic winner, defeated O. A. H. Magoun, Jr., of Princeton, 6—0, 6—1. The old-time National champion, Henry W. Slocum, won his first match, defeating R. P. Bennett, 6—2 6—3. Players from the West are expected to take their places in the tournament this afternoon. The summary:

MISS STOKES TROTS FAST.

Captures $11,000 Futurity at Detroit—Braden Direct Best in Pace.

DETROIT, Aug. 2.—Miss Stokes, a bay filly, which, as a yearling, held the trotting championship, lived up to her reputation when, in three hotly contested heats, she won the $11,000 purse and the silver cup in the trotting division of the Horseman Futurity, the main attraction on to-day's Grand Circuit programme. This stake brought the three-year-olds together for their first clash this year, and the fast time made shows the class of the starters, only three of which remained in to the finish.

The division of the purse gives Miss Stokes $5,400 and the $500 silver cup. In addition $200 goes to the nominator of her dam.

The pacing division of the Futurity, value $4,000, brought out only three starters, which was won by Braden Direct. The summary:

TRUST STOCKS DECLINE

Break in American Tobacco and Standard Oil a Factor in General Market—Very Good Cotton Report.

Selling such as had depressed prices during the closing hour on Tuesday continued throughout yesterday's session of the Stock Exchange and resulted in considerably heavier losses than had been recorded the previous day. No part of the list offered substantial resistance to the decline, and in addition to the losses, ranging from 1 to 2 points and over in the active issues, there were a number of declines of larger proportions in stocks whose narrower market made them particularly susceptible to the liquidation which was encountered yesterday. The one really favorable factor in the day's developments was the Government cotton report, which confirmed the expectation that it would indicate the largest yield of that staple which the South has ever harvested. Its force as an aid to the stock market was much diminished, however, by reason of the fact that while making a most excellent showing it did not come up to the highest of the expectations which had been entertained regarding it. The Government's estimated condition of 89.1 on July 25 compares with 88.2 for June 25 and with 78.5 at this time in 1910. Only once in the last twelve years has the August report shown a higher condition, and in that year, 1904, the acreage was much below this year's. Promising as it does a crop somewhere in the neighborhood of 14,500,000 bales, the largest ever harvested, this report can very justly be regarded as a development of the most favorable import, but it was without influence in the day's events on the Stock Exchange. This, probably was in part due to the fact that one of the matters discussed yesterday was the large losses of an operator in the cotton market who had committed himself heavily to the long side of that market before the decline which has been in progress for several weeks. Toward the close of the day it was understood that a substantial amount of securities had been taken over from this operator and that thereby his difficult position in the cotton market had been relieved.

This was but one of the adverse influences which the market had to meet, for a distinctly unfavorable impression was created in Stock Exchange circles by the weakness which developed yesterday in the shares of the Standard Oil Company and of the American Tobacco Company, the two industrial combinations which are now being dissolved in compliance with the recent decisions of the Supreme Court under the Sherman anti-trust law. Early in the day the Directors of the American Tobacco Company announced that in view of the decision calling for the reorganization of the company the usual dividend on the common stock, which would have been payable in September, would be omitted. Apart from the delay which this involves, this decision on the part of the Directors does not appear materially to affect the position of the holders of the common stock, for the omission of this dividend means, of course, that there will be just that much more left in the treasury of the company for distribution in connection with the approaching reorganization. The announcement that the dividend would not be paid, however, was one of the influences which affected not only the price of American Tobacco itself, but also the general market sentiment of the day. Some and perhaps all of the selling of Standard Oil was directly traceable to liquidation by holders who preferred to convert the stock into cash now rather than to accept the many fractional lots to which they would be entitled under the plan lately announced by the company.

Still other matters with which the market concerned itself yesterday and in some of which it found direct occasion for some of the day's selling included reports regarding the probable showing to be made by the Allis-Chalmers Company for the past half year; the denial by an officer of the company that the Directors of the Bethlehem Steel Company proposed the declaration of a dividend on the preferred stock at this time, and reports that certain loans which had been made in Paris early in the year on American securities were maturing and would not be renewed. In the absence of more specific information on the subject the decline which occurred in the Allis-Chalmers securities, ranging from 2 in the common to 5½ in the preferred, with a loss of 2¼ in the company's bonds, were accepted as lending color to the reports regarding poor earnings. So far as the rumors dealing with loans obtained from the French market are concerned, it can hardly be that any important amount of money has been recalled by Paris from this market. As a matter of fact, the foreign markets have lately been paying off large loans which they had obtained here earlier in the year. This is particularly true of Germany. American balances in Paris have been large, and lately have been reduced, but there appears to be no foundation for the reported calling in of money from this market by Paris bankers. America has been in the particularly favorable position this year of lending money to Europe instead of borrowing there in the large amounts which have been usual in most other years. The temper of the Stock Exchange yesterday led it to lay much emphasis, and perhaps too much emphasis, on incidents which do not bear on the fundamentals of the situation, however much discomfort they may cause to individual operators or to the holders of individual securities. In the long run the promise contained in the Government cotton report will have more influence than most of the other matters which were subject of discussion yesterday.

Slumps in American Tobacco, Standard Oil, and Transit Enliven Curb.

RECOVERIES BEFORE CLOSE

American Tobacco Regains 11 Points and Standard Oil 17½ from the Low Levels—Greater Activity.

Sharp breaks in American Tobacco and Standard Oil and a flurry in Manhattan Transit enlivened the Curb market yesterday and made the day one of larger activity than has been seen in some time. American Tobacco reported transactions of over 1,000 shares and Standard Oil of over 200. Manhattan Transit transactions, reported in round numbers at 10,000, carried the stock down to 2, and the break, which compares with the recent high price of 4, resulted in rumors of the embarrassment of one Curb firm which has been prominent in the market made for this issue since the recent favorable decision of the Public Service Commission. American Tobacco sold off from the opening at 365 to 354 and recovered to 370. Standard Oil dropped from 643 to 633 and recovered to 650. The mining shares were the most active Canadian reporting transactions of 4,000 shares with a rise from 5¼ to 5⅝, and Giroux 2,000 shares from 6 down to 5⅝, the close being at 5¾.

Transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with opening, high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

BUMPER COTTON CROP STILL INDICATED

Estimates of Around 14,500,000 Bales Based on Official Report for July 25.

DISCOUNTED ON MARKET

Condition of 89.1 Per Cent. of Normal Too Close to Expectations of Dealers to Affect Prices Markedly.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Reports on the growing cotton crop for 1911 received by the Department of Agriculture continue to indicate that the yield this year will be one of the greatest, if not the greatest, in the history of the industry. The condition of the crop on July 25, as announced today, was 89.1 per cent. of a normal. This was nine-tenths of 1 per cent. higher than a month ago, and 9.7 per cent. above the average on July 25 for the past ten years.

Based on the average condition of the crop on July 25 for the past ten years, and the average yield per acre for the same period, the condition reported today, if it should continue, would indicate a final total yield of 207.25 pounds per acre, which, upon 34,000,000 acres, the estimated final acreage, allowing for the abandonment of 3 per cent. of the acreage, means a total cotton crop of 14,-063,000 bales of 500 pounds each. This estimate is unofficial.

Comparison of conditions by States follows:

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 2.—The Government report on the condition of the crop of July 25 fell flat on the cotton market to-day. The figures, 89.1, had little effect on prices. The new crop deliveries rose 4 to 6 points, but immediately fell off again. The general expectation was for a report of about 89. Many bears, however, looked for 90. Eighty-nine was high enough, but had been discounted in the declines of the last week. Bears claimed that the figures pointed to a yield of at least 15,000,000 bales.

When the report was issued the market stood 9 to 10 points under yesterday's close. The rise of 4 to 6 points was soon lost and prices did not stop sagging under fresh short selling until the list was 10 to 13 points under yesterday's close. At noon prices were at a net decline of 5 to 6 points.

Although the Government report of the condition of cotton showed a gain of 9 points over the figure of the previous month, it was a disappointment to unofficial observers, whose reports, issued the previous day, had ranged up to 92 per cent. The usual canvass taken each month among active members of the Cotton Exchange in advance of the issue of the Government report put the probable percentage of condition at 90½. The first result of the announcement of the Government figures was a buying movement in the local market, but it made little headway in the face of heavy selling, both from the South and local operators.

The highest prices of the day were 10.95c per pound for the October and December options, 5 and 2 points, respectively, above the close of Tuesday, but 14 and 16 points, respectively, above the day's lowest levels. March cotton sold as high as 11.04c, a gain of 3 points over Tuesday's close and an advance of 14 points from the low point yesterday.

Estimates of the probable yield based on the Government report averaged about 14,500,000 bales. One factor of uncertainty in making crop predictions is the acreage reported by the Government, which at 35,000,000 acres is materially below that of The Financial Chronicle, which has a past record of being closer to results than the Government experts. Without allowing for a loss of acreage, other estimates put the prospective crop at 15,000,000 bales.

Central Did Well in July.

William C. Brown, President of the New York Central Railroad sailed for Liverpool yesterday on the Cunard liner Mauretania with Mrs. Brown and Walter Pollock, Superintendent of the Marine Department of the road. Mr. Brown said that the last was one of the best July months for business in the history of the Central lines. He said that the work of construction at the Grand Central Terminal was the only work which would require a purchase of steel.

"The crop reports," he said, "are good, except from Iowa—and there has recently been rain there, too—and everything points to good and increasing business. We are still buying what steel we need for the construction work. We are still going ahead with our experimental farms. Business seems to be improving all along the line, and I look for a sound prosperity."

Decline in Allis-Chalmers.

There was a sudden decline in the quotations on Allis-Chalmers securities yesterday, which was explained on the ground that some one had discovered that the company's earnings have been poor lately, and that as a result it has been doing little better than earning its fixed charges. The common stock closed at 6½, off two points from the previous close, while the preferred sold down to 22, and closed but a half point above that, a loss of 5½ points for the day. The liquidation extended to the company's 5 per cent. bonds, which declined to 70, a drop of four points from Tuesday's last price, although they later recovered a point and a quarter. Much of the selling was in response to Western orders, and came as a surprise to the New York houses. Allis-Chalmers sold down to 14 during the 1907 panic. Its earnings for the last year have not yet been made public.

Wabash-Pittsburg.

The Wabash-Pittsburg reorganization plan has made little progress in recent weeks, owing to the absence from New York of most of the men who have been working upon it. It is understood that the provisions affecting the Wabash Railroad have been approved by a majority of the Directors as individuals, and that the ratification by the board will follow as soon as a quorum can be obtained. An underwriting syndicate to handle the new issues has been formed by the bankers chiefly interested in the old securities. It attempts to get enough Wabash Directors together to make a board meeting possible to-day or to-morrow succeed, the long awaited Wabash-Pittsburg plan may be announced in the early part of next week.

Corporation's Quota.

Statistics of pig iron production for the first half of the current year, compiled officially by the American Iron & Steel Association, make possible an estimate of the United States Steel Corporation's proportionate part in the steel and iron business of the country. Judge Gary, in his testimony before the Stanley Committee in Washington, explained that the corporation did not aim at anything like a monopolistic share in the steel and iron trade. The annual returns show that the corporation's share in the pig iron production of the United States has been well below 50 per cent. since organization, although steel ingot production has ranged above the 50 per cent. mark. For the first half of this year the pig iron production of the country was 11,666,000 tons of pig iron, of which the Iron Age puts the corporation's share at 42.9 per cent., against 43.4 per cent. in 1910 and 44.9 per cent. in 1902, the first complete year of the corporation's operations. Steel ingot production of the corporation for the current week is up to 76 per cent. of capacity and on some days of last week was at the rate of 48,000 gross tons a day. This would be at the annual rate of 14,300,000 tons, against the previous best record for a year of 14,179,000 tons, reached in 1910. In 1908, the last year for which comparative statistics are available, the corporation's output of ingots and castings was 58.1 per cent. of the country's total.

Schwab Denies Dividend.

In connection with the marked activity in Bethlehem Steel issues last week and the rise which has just abated President Schwab's unqualified utterances on the movement and the dividend question made to an interviewer yesterday on his return from an inspection of the plants have point. Mr. Schwab said there was no truth in the report that the company would pay dividends on the preferred stock in the near future, and said he had no knowledge of the upward movement in the shares, which he characterized as probably due to manipulation. This statement is in line with the position Mr. Schwab has long held in regard to dividends. He has declared often that he would not take up dividends until the company's construction plans had been completed and the plants put on a sound foundation of working capital.

Cotton Economics.

The sharp declines in cotton since the Government reports have been indicating a bumper cotton crop and the consequent discomfiture of the bulls who had the market practically all their own way for two seasons may have something to do with the calamitous view of the present outlook for a record crop taken by one brokerage firm, which has been counted in the bull camp. In a circular on cotton just issued this firm calculates a declining valuation of the cotton yield on the basis of crops ranging from 12,000,000 to 15,500,000 bales, and calls on the planters to hold back some of their product both for the sake of valorising the price and supplying a reminder that might be a deterrent on planting next season. Should such a crop as the extreme predictions call for be produced, the circular says, "the South would have none but themselves to blame." It is argued that a crop of 12,000,000 bales would have brought $300,000,000 more than a 15,000,000-bale crop, and that a 13,000,000-bale crop would have been worth netarly $100,000,000 more than a 14,000,000-bale crop. Even if the present picking should aggregate 15,000,000 bales, the circular continues, the South, "by refusing to market more than 12,000,000 bales, or by holding one bale in five, could sell the 12,000,000 bales for several hundred million dollars more than it would secure should it attempt to market all of the crop, and in addition the South would have left behind 3,000,000 bales as a reminder against overproduction in 1912."

EXCEPTIONS IN CHICAGO

New Chicago Railways Issues Make Gains in Face of Heavy Market—Declines General Elsewhere.

With the exception of the Chicago Railways issues the stock market in Chicago yesterday displayed a heavy tendency where changes of considerable size occurred. The Series 2 especially were strong with a rise to within a shade of 35, though receding a point before the close. The Series 1 went up a point, to 101, but eased off again to par, and there were gains of large fractions in the 3s and 4s. Peoples Gas, Can common, and Sears-Roebuck, on the other hand, receded fractionally. There was a stronger feeling in the Chicago money market. Commercial paper sold at 4@4½, the lower rate being for short maturities and gilt-edged signatures. The movement of currency to the interior was larger, the Northwest taking a large proportion of the amounts asked for, but the Southwest also made insistent demands, which suggested a free movement from that quarter in view of the betterment the corn crop is showing.

The depression in New York affected the Philadelphia market, and the local tractions and Union were offered down on light sales. Rapid Transit trust certificates were about the most active issue of the list, but they suffered a slight lapse on profit-taking by speculators who purchased last week. United Gas Improvement and Lehigh Navigation also eased off, as did Lehigh Valley. Many of the anthracite collieries were closed last night for the balance of the week.

Selling orders predominated in Boston, and prices receded. Amalgamated broke to 65¾, North Butte to 31¼, and the balance of the list shows a proportionate decline. The close was irregular at the recession.

After several days of pronounced activity and strength in Baltimore, Houston Oil shares became comparatively quiet, and though the prices were lower than the best, the recessions were small considering the violent advance. Cotton Duck 5s were firm and higher.

Yesterday's transactions on the various out-of-town Exchanges, as reported to THE NEW YORK TIMES, were as follows:

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

London and Paris Markets Strong—Berlin Boerse Weak.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—Money was easy and discount rates were steady to-day.

The settlement was concluded without trouble on the Stock Exchange, but the markets were generally heavy on further liquidation, the dock strike and the prolonged Moroccan discussion. Mexican rails were firm, exceptions to the downward tendency, and they advanced on the good June earnings statement.

American securities opened quiet and steady and during the first hour advanced a fraction on light covering. But the unsatisfactory earnings of the Harriman lines caused Continental selling and prices declined. In the afternoon Wall Street offerings caused further losses and the market closed weak.

COMMODITY MARKETS.

WHEAT.—Wheat, after a morning of strength, reacted, closing at near the low price for the day and at a net loss. The cables were less favorable than expected, and foreign demand does not follow the American advance in the way of actual export business. Very little attention was paid to the foreign reports. There was a heavy rainstorm in the Argentine which was considered favorable for the wheat crop, and the official preliminary Italian estimate made the wheat crop this year 207,000,000 bushels; or 50,000,000 bushels more than last year. The weather conditions were favorable for harvest in England. The weather was favorable in the Northwest for harvest, and extensive reports from the Canadian Northwest contradicted the black-rust claims. Although Snow was out with a Spring wheat estimate of only 215,000,000 bushels for the crop and 455,000,000 bushels of Winter wheat there were other estimates from the Northwest not so pessimistic. Conservative reports from the Northwest claim a promise of 165,000,000 to 175,000,000 bushels for the three States alone. The effect of the crop news and the foreign reports was to induce considerable realising, while the cash demand was slow and near deliveries were relatively weak. The Western receipts were again moderate compared with last year, the three days' movement showing a total of 1,900,000 bushels below a year ago. No export sales of wheat were reported. No. 2 red was quoted at 94½c, free on board; No. 1 Northern, 91.18; No. 2 hard Winter, 90.46; No. 1 Manitoba, 91.05¼.

CORN.—Corn was active and strong, advancing to new high levels for the movement. Very unfavorable reports were received from Iowa, Nebraska and parts of Illinois. This was followed by a report from Snow showing a loss in crop conditions for the month of 12.3 with a present crop promise of 2,950,000,000 bushels, against 3,056,000,000, the Government ind

PASS THE DIVIDEND ON TOBACCO COMMON

Stockholders Surprised When Directors Decide to Hold Up Quarterly Payment.

NOTHING TO BE LOST BY IT

Directors Explain That It Might Be Improper to Pay It Until Court Approves What Is to be Done.

Smaller stockholders in the American Tobacco Company received an unpleasant surprise yesterday morning when they learned that the Directors had passed the usual quarterly dividend of 10 per cent. on the common stock. It had been assumed that in the absence of any prohibition in the Supreme Court's decision against the continuance of dividends that the regular payments would be continued until the time of dissolution.

The news of the Directors' action was quickly reflected in the activity of Tobacco common on the Curb. The stock opened at 385, and advanced one point over Tuesday night's close, but quickly sold down 21 points. Part of the loss was recovered later and the stock closed at 375, a loss of 9 points for the day. A total of nearly 1,100 shares were traded in, whereas from 25 to 50 shares furnish a normal day's transactions in this high-priced issue.

It was reported that the Directors had decided to pass the dividend upon learning that an attempt might be made by bondholders to enjoin payment, but this could not be verified. The preferred dividend is not due until September, but it was assumed that yesterday's action means the passing of this payment as well.

The American Tobacco Company made public the following letter, which will be sent to holders of the common stock explaining their position:

By the recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of the State of New York was directed to ascertain and determine some plan or method of dissolving the combination which was found to exist and of recreating out of the elements now composing it a new condition which shall be honestly in harmony with and not repugnant to the law.

The Directors of the American Tobacco Company are devoting themselves earnestly to the task of working out a solution of the problem which shall commend itself to the courts to which the whole matter is thus committed.

In the ordinary course the regular dividend upon the common stock of the company would be declared at the present time, payable in September. Although the earnings of the company would amply justify payment of the usual dividend, Directors feel that at the present time and in advance of the approval by the courts of any plan of disintegration it would be improper and perhaps lacking in respect to the courts for them to make any distribution of earnings to the common stock and have, therefore, determined to omit the declaration of the usual September dividend.

Two weeks before the Supreme Court's decision was handed down, American Tobacco common sold at 520, so that last night's closing price represents a loss of 145 a share. It is said that most of the selling has been done by the smaller holders and that the larger owners of the stock have increased their holdings.

There were various reports in Wall Street yesterday that the Tobacco Company had submitted a tentative plan for reorganization to the Circuit Court and that it had been rejected. This was denied by members of the Protective Committees, who said that no plan has yet been formulated and that the whole matter is in a confused state. The court's decree allowed the company until Dec. 1, to dissolve, with a proviso that an additional 60 days might be allowed if the six months should prove too short a time in which to work out a reorganization plan. As the common stock will be entitled to all assets remaining after the provision for the company's bonds and preferred stock, it was pointed out yesterday that the passing of the quarterly dividend meant nothing more than a temporary loss to the stockholders. There has been no move for the organization of a protective committee for this issue, most of which is held by a few men.

Standard Oil stock slumped heavily on the Curb yesterday under selling which was in unusual volume for that issue. After opening at 645, even with the last price of Tuesday, the price dropped immediately to 640 and on transactions of about 125 shares had fallen to 622. This is the lowest price of the year, being about 18 points below the previous low level in 1911 and within 4½ points of the lowest in 1910. The highest price this year was 690, reached just prior to the handing down of the Standard Oil decision. Last year the highest price was 670. The highest price ever reached was in 1901, when the shares sold up to 842 and the lowest since then was 390, the panic price of 1907.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Three Big West Side Apartments in $800,000 Leasehold Deal—George J. Gould Forecloses on Dyckman Plot—The Bronx and Suburban Market.

A very moderate volume of trading characterized the realty market yesterday. A striking indication of the upper west side apartment house activity, however, was shown in the leasing for a long term of years of three large eight-story apartment houses on Morningside Heights, for $800,000. The lease was made by Calder, Nassoit & Lanning to the Southern Holding Company, Fitzhugh C. Speer, President.

The houses involved in the transaction are the Louisiana, the Illinois, and the Michigan, covering a plot 200 by 100, at 507, 511, and 517 West 113th Street, adjoining the northwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue.

George J. Gould Forecloses Dyckman Plot.

Among the offerings in the Vesey Street Auction Room yesetrday was a 100-foot plot in the Dyckman section, forming the northwest corner of Sherman Avenue and Isham Street, which was foreclosed by George J. Gould to recover a mortgage and interest aggregating about $28,000.

The plot was secured by the Washington Heights Realty Company, the second mortgagee, for $30,000. This price, however, does not represent the value of the plot, the total incumbrance against it being in the neighborhood of $40,000.

Deal in Midtown Loft Section.

The BELNORD
BROADWAY TO AMSTERDAM AVENUE
Eighty-sixth to Eighty-seventh Street

¶ Few apartment houses in the world can compare with The Belnord in comfort and high modern efficiency. In point of size it is unrivaled, being the largest in the world and enclosing the largest court.

¶ A highly important feature of the Belnord is that every room is an outside room. Those rooms which look on to Belnord Court are unequalled in New York for quietness and light.

¶ The gratifying absence of noise and vibration in The Belnord is due to the fact that the engine rooms are not located under any part of the building proper, but under the court.

¶ Suites contain from 7 to 11 rooms at yearly rentals of $2,400 and up. Each apartment includes the latest devices for comfort and convenience and the service is perfection. Interested parties are welcome to inspect The Belnord.

¶ Reservation can now be made for October 1st.

Lost Articles Recovered.

¶ "What shall I do?" is the first thought that flashes through the mind when some article of value is lost. The answer is: "Advertise in the Lost and Found column of The New York Times."

¶ The Lost and Found advertisements tell an interesting story from day to day. A pet dog is sought, a large reward offered, or a widow seeking to recover a pocket-book containing a lifetime's savings. If The Times's readers find them, they will be restored.

¶ Go to any advertising agency or telephone The New York Times, Bryant 1000.

NOTICE TO EMPLOYERS.

Commencing August 15th, 1911,

WE WILL PROVIDE IN OUR BUILDING AT 66 AND 68 COOPER SQUARE, (CORNER 7TH STREET AND 4TH AVE.), ONE ENTIRE FLOOR WHERE SKILLED WORKMEN OF ALL KINDS CAN CONGREGATE MORNINGS FOR THE PURPOSE OF BEING INTERVIEWED BY PROSPECTIVE EMPLOYERS. WE WILL ALSO PROVIDE ON ANOTHER FLOOR SPACE FOR UNSKILLED WORKMEN.

EMPLOYERS ARE RESPECTFULLY REQUESTED TO SEND THEIR REPRESENTATIVES TO THE ABOVE ADDRESS WHENEVER IT IS POSSIBLE TO DO SO IN PLACE OF TELEPHONING, SO AS TO PERSONALLY SELECT THE MEN NEEDED. THIS METHOD OF BRINGING EMPLOYER AND EMPLOYEE TOGETHER WILL NOT ONLY DO AWAY WITH THE BOTHER OF ADVERTISING, BUT WILL BE OF BENEFIT TO THE WORKING MEN AND ADVANTAGEOUS TO EMPLOYERS, AS IT IS NOW, IT IS IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE WORKING MAN TO CALL IN RESPONSE TO THE MANY ADVERTISEMENTS FOR HELP IN HIS LINE APPEARING IN THE DAILY PAPERS, AT THE PLACES HE IS ABLE TO CALL, HE FREQUENTLY IS NOT ACCEPTED FOR ONE REASON OR ANOTHER, AND BY THE TIME HE ARRIVES AT OTHER PLACES HE IS TOO LATE. THIS CAUSES HIM TO BE OUT OF EMPLOYMENT DAYS AT A TIME, AND EMPLOYERS FREQUENTLY HAVE TO REPEAT THEIR ADVERTISEMENTS BEFORE THEY SECURE THE SUITABLE MEN, SO IT CAN READILY BE SEEN THAT BY HAVING ONE PLACE WHERE EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYEES CAN MEET, IT WILL SAVE BOTH NOT ONLY TIME AND MONEY, BUT A GREAT DEAL OF TROUBLE.

EVERY MAN SEEKING EMPLOYMENT MAY HAVE THE BENEFIT OF OUR SERVICES FREE OF CHARGE UNTIL HE ACTUALLY SECURES EMPLOYMENT THROUGH US, WHEN A SMALL FEE WILL BE CHARGED.

FIND POOR LOSE SOME OF THEIR INSURANCE

Advantage Taken of Their Necessity to Force Settlement, It Is Charged.

COMPANIES' BOOKS SHOW IT

Examiners Report Evidepce to Insurance Commissioners' Committee, Which Will Recommend New Laws.

Evidence against some health and insurance companies, the most damaging, it was said, since the Armstrong investigation, was obtained yesterday by the special committee of State Insurance Commissioners, sitting in the Manhattan Hotel. Much of the evidence was obtained by special examiners, who have been going over the companies' books, and it will be used in any action which may be taken against the companies.

It was found that some companies, taking advantage of the helplessness of their poor clients, compromised or adjusted claims, so that thousands of dollars, withheld from victims of accidents or from their widows, children, or dependents, went to increase dividends or surpluses of the companies.

No member of the committee would talk for publication of the charges before the conclusion of the investigation on Aug. 14, when the committee's report and its recommendations for remedying the evils will be made public. This report will be submitted to the National Insurance Commissioners' Convention in Milwaukee, Wis., on Aug. 22, with the idea that the proposed reforms in the conduct of the industrial insurance departments be laid before the State Legislatures, to have them embodied in the laws of each. C. A. Palmer, Chairman of the committee, who will draft the report to the convention, said:

"The committee will formulate a system for the protection of the poor who have their all invested in industrial insurance, and recommend that the system govern both domestic and foreign companies doing business in the United States."

Hearings are being given to all of the companies, which are allowed to make objections or to disprove anything they can. Later the companies will have opportunity to reply to the findings of the committee and to proposed legislation affecting them. Representatives of a New York and a Philadelphia company were heard yesterday. This completes the work of the committee in this city. Opportunity will be given to fifteen or twenty other companies to appear at hearings in Detroit before Aug. 14.

Besides Chairman Palmer, the committee consists of William H. Hotchkiss, Insurance Commissioner of New York; Frederick H. Potter, Superintendent of Insurance of Illinois; Frank H. Hardison of Massachusetts, Col. Joseph Button of Richmond, Va., President of the National Insurance Commissioners' Convention; Commissioner Hammond of Connecticut, and Samuel McCullough, Insurance Commissioner of Pennsylvania.

GET CLARY SAFE FROM MINE.

Miner Buried Since Sunday Falls Into Rescuers' Arms.

JOPLIN, Mo., Aug. 2.—Joseph Clary, imprisoned by a cave-in in the White Oak mine near this city since last Sunday morning, and supplied with food through a drill hole yesterday, was reached by rescuers this morning. He was taken out alive and well.

When the last spadeful of earth was removed by workmen in the shaft and they dropped through into the drift, Clary threw himself into their arms and wept while the shouts of thousands cheering at the mouth of the mine echoed down the shaft.

Three workmen were digging in the narrow shaft when the bottom gave way and they dropped into the drift. Clary saw the light of day and looked up on fellow beings after a period in darkness which though reckoned by him to be something over four days, was really exactly three days and 45 minutes.

Clary, though in fair condition, was greatly weakened. At a signal from the rescuers a physician was lowered. He administered stimulants. Clary was hoisted to the surface and set foot on top of earth ten minutes after he was found.

Curious spectators were kept from him. His father, brothers, and the physician hurried him away to the Clary home nearby, where his mother, weakened by the strain of her long vigil, lay ill. Clary is 23 years old, the son of Thomas Clary, a pioneer mine operator, who has directed the rescue work constantly since his son's imprisonment. Relays of men and boys began digging the shaft Sunday, and have worked night and day since. The first three attempts to drill a small hole to admit air and nourishment failed, but the fourth was succesful yesterday. It was found that Clary was in imminent danger of drowning from water rising in the drift. Diggers in the shaft redoubled their energy with the result that the drift was reached hours earlier than expected.

SCHULTZE FREED OF DEBTS.

Partner of Otto Heinze Defeats Creditors Who Opposed Discharge.

Max H. Schultze, who was a partner in the firm of Otto Heinze & Co., bankers and brokers of 42 Broadway, has won his fight against three creditors who opposed his discharge in bankruptcy before William Allen, referee. There were eleven objections to his discharge filed by the Mercantile National Bank and two other creditors.

Referee Allen decided yesterday that none of the specifications had been sustained, and recommended that Mr. Schultze be granted a discharge individually and as a member of the firm.

One specification was that he concealed six life insurance policies. Referee Allen finds that he transferred the policies to his wife years before the bankruptcy, and since then she has paid the premiums with her own money.

Another specification charged a false oath in not placing in his schedules some real estate and buildings in Locust Valley and the referee finds that the property belongs to Mrs. Schultze. The charge that he failed to keep account books was not proved.

Mr. Schultze filed a voluntary petition on Oct. 11, 1910.

MINE EXPLOSION KILLS THREE

Gas Ignites from Electric Spark in Coal Shaft at Shannon.

BLUEFIELD, West Va., Aug. 2.—Three miners were killed and six injured by an explosion a few minutes before midnight in the mine of the Standard Pocahontas Coal Company at Shannon. The mine recently began operations and has not yet made any shipments.

With the exception of W. J. Andrew all the dead and injured were negroes Andrew was married only a few days ago.

The explosion was said to be due to an ignition of gas by a spark from the socket of a broken electric light bulb.

RAID STANDARD OIL PLANT.

Cleveland Officials Charge Fraud in Sale of So-Called Artificial Gas.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 2.—A raid was made by city officials last night on the artificial gas plant of the East Ohio Gas Company, a Standard Oil subsidiary, which supplies the city with artificial and natural gas. They laid part of their alleged evidence to-day before County Prosecutor Cline, with a view to possible Grand Jury investigation.

The raiders, who were aided by city police, obtained samples of a product which they say the company has been mixing with so-called artificial gas, and which they assert is natural gas. These samples will be analyzed at once. The public pays 80 cents a thousand feet for artificial gas and 30 cents for natural gas.

MINISTER PAINTS CHURCH.

The Rev. Dr. Sampson, 70, Disliked Preaching in One Not Painted.

Special to The New York Times.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., Aug. 2.—Unassisted, although more than 70 years of age, the Rev. Dr. John Patterson Sampson has just completed painting the Methodist Church mission building on Washington Street. He collected money with which to buy paint and brushes, and with the exception of vigorous men to help him shift ladders and staging, he did the entire job himself, humming Gospel melodies as he worked.

Now that his church is painted he will close its doors for the remainder of the month, and visit his family at Asbury Park. He will return after the hot weather, glad to take up his work here, for he declares that he never felt right preaching in an unpainted church. The building had never been painted before.

BELLEVUE VACATIONS.

Court Appealed To by Inquiry Bureau, Which Wants to See the Schedule.

Supreme Court Justice Brady reserved decision yesterday on an application of William H. Allen, director of the Bureau of Municipal Research, for an order requiring Health Commissioner Lederle to permit him, or some person representing him, to examine the vacation schedules of the nurses and physicians assigned to the Child Hygienic Bureau of the Health Department.

"Under the law," said Assistant Corporation Counsel Hahlo, who opposed the application, "the person applying for such an examination must show a particular reason for wishing to examine any records or papers. This the petitioner does not do. He only desires to see what the vacation schedules are."

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Reports from Steel Centres Favorable —Pig Iron Production Increases.

Commenting on the situation in the iron and steel trade The Iron Age says:

The tenor of reports from steel selling and producing centres is still favorable. The statistics of production by the leading interests indicate either that the steel trade is in better condition than has been appreciated, or that the Steel Corporation has of late had a slightly larger share of current shipments than was the case two or three months ago.

The pig iron production of two large independent companies has increased and the Steel Corporation continues to operate about two-thirds of its blast furnaces capacity.

The orders of the Carnegie Steel Company in July for billets, sheet bars, and track material, apart from rails, were greater than those for June. In steel bars, wire products, and galvanized sheets, price variations have been reported, and latterly there have been similar intimations concerning plates.

The Iron Trade Review says:

In mill operations and sales of finished products July made better record than June. Steel works' operations of various subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation are scheduled this week to reach 70 per cent., which will represent the highest rate of ingot production during the [illegible]

NINETEENTH FORGERY PROVES HIS UNDOING

Funk, Who Swindled a Brooklyn Bank Out of $1,800, Wanted in as Many Cities.

HIS METHOD NEVER VARIED

Police Say He Deposited Forged Checks on Fridays, Drew Against Them and Fled Saturdays.

Detectives arrested a man yesterday in East Stroudsburg, Penn., who has committed forgeries on banks in many important cities of the East and Middle West. Edward Funk is the man's name, and his aliases are many. He carried out a successful swindle in Brooklyn two weeks ago, when he got $376 from the Broadway branch of the Mechanics' Bank on a forged certified check on a bank in Omaha. In a year and a half, the Pinkertons say, Funk carried out nineteen forgeries on which he obtained about $5,000. He operated in Boston, Providence, Norfolk, Pittsburg, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Omaha, and Kansas City.

On Aug. 1 the detectives were advised by an Omaha bank, which had been swindled once by Funk, that another of his checks had come in from the Mechanics' Bank of Brooklyn. The check was for $1,800, and was made payable to J. E. Morton. The investigations of the Pinkertons disclosed the fact that in June, 1911, Funk, under the name of J. E. Morton, had opened a grocery store at 609 Hart Street, Brooklyn. As a grocer Funk was evidently not a success, for by July 20 the store had been closed and the stock sent to a New York auction house. Funk, who had been living in an apartment over his store, disappeared on July 16.

Two days before Funk dropped out of sight he was introduced at the Broadway branch of the Mechanics' Bank and opened an account with the certified check for $1,800 on the Omaha Bank. The next day he withdrew $376. By the time the bank learned that a swindle had been perpetrated Funk had vanished and had covered his trail. The detectives traced him to East Stroudsburg and arrested him there yesterday morning.

Funk was released from the Ohio State Penitentiary in March, 1910, having served a sentence for forgery. He took up the same line of activity almost as soon as he was free. The method he used was the same everywhere, and, the detectives say, was well planned. In Eastern cities he forged checks on Western banks, and when working in the West forged checks on New York and Boston. It was his habit to represent himself as a partner or an agent of an Eastern—or Western as the case might call for—business concern, and go to a real estate agent or some business house and rent a small space for an office. Through his landlord he would get an introduction to a bank.

A fixed part of his plan was to make his deposit of a forged certified check on Friday, drawing against it on the following day. He always picked a bank far enough away to require at least until the following Monday for the knowledge of the forgery to reach the bank which had cashed his check. Nineteen times he has carried out this programme and escaped as often. He was far above the ordinary forger in cunning, the detectives declared, and a past master of the art of making a get away without leaving tell-tale evidence of the direction he had traveled.

Some of Funk's aliases are Edward Stillings, Edward Sawyer, James Murphy, Edward Welch, and E. A. Benton. He will go to Cleveland or St. Paul for trial, as banks in those cities say they have claims on him prior to the bank in Omaha.

HOPES DIEGLE WILL CONFESS.

Light Sentence May Be Offered Guilty Sergeant-at-Arms.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 2.—The motion for a new trial in the case of Rodney J. Diegle, Sergeant-of-Arms of the State Senate, who was convicted of bribery July 3, was overruled to-day. The court announced that sentence would be passed on Diegle this week. The maximum penalty is five years in the penitentiary and $500 fine, or both.

The court also overruled a motion interposed by attorneys for the defense to have sentence suspended until after the appeal of the case can be decided by the Circuit Court, to which it will be taken as soon as sentence is imposed.

It is believed that sentence was deferred to give Prosecuting Attorney Turner another chance to see Diegle and offer him a light sentence and immunity from prosecution on two other indictments standing against him if he will turn State's evidence and tell of the inducements in which he is supposed to have acted as a go-between for a number of State Senators who are said to have accepted bribes during the last session of the General Assembly.

Diegle was the first legislative official to meet the Burns detectives when they were brought here by the Manufacturers' Association to work up the bribery cases against Senators and Representatives. He was paid $50 with the promise of more by Detective Frank N. Smiley for arranging for the votes of Senators L. H. Andrews, George K. Cetone and L. R. Huffman on the Whitemore Insurance bill. He was convicted solely on the testimony of Detective Smiley and the dictograph. The testimony showed that Senators Andrews, Cetone and Huffman received $200 each from Smiley in the latter's room at the Chittenden Hotel.

Twelve indictments are still pending against four Senators and four Representatives. There are four more indictments against Representative George B. Nye, who was acquitted on one charge two months ago. The trials will be resumed in September.

NEGROES DYING OUT.

Richmond Health Officer Sees Their End by Twenty-first Century.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 2.—Dr. Ernest C. Levy, Chief Health Officer of Richmond, has come to the conclusion after close comparative study of the mortuary statistics of this and other cities that the American negro is slowly and steadily dying out, and will be virtually extinct in the twenty-first century.

"The colored race," he points out, "with 38 per cent. of the population of Richmond, has 96 per cent. of the deaths, and the birth rate is equally against the colored race."

ANTI-SMOKERS INCORPORATE.

Dr. Wiley One of Directors of the Protective League of America.

ALBANY, N. The league will attempt to encourage and insist on the enforcement of laws, ordinances, and regulations restricting smoking.

The Directors are: Dr. Harvey W. Wiley of Washington, President of the American Therapeutical Society; William A. McKeever, Kansas Agricultural University; Chancellor James R. Day, Syracuse University; Jay W. Seaver, New Haven, Conn.; G. L. Babri, and Dr. Charles G. Pease, New York; Thomas E. Stowell, University of Southern California; Burt G. ARREST CUSTOMS MEN FOR THEFT OF WINE

But Smuggling Charge Is Made That Trial May Be Had in the Federal Court.

GOODS TAKEN FROM PIERS

Collector Loeb Has Had Watch Kept for Two Years—Both Men Admit Guilt and Are Held.

Edward J. Loud, a customs investigator, who has been for two years on a case, arrested yesterday Frank Gordon and Charles A. Petterman, both samplers in the Gauger's Department of the Customs Service, on charges of smuggling into the country three cans of port wine. It is said that the smuggling charge was brought rather than one of simple larceny, so that the cases can be tried by the Federal authorities. Petterman has been in the Government employ five years and Gordon one year. Both are from Brooklyn.

Collector Loeb made an investigation about two years ago after receiving many complaints, and he became convinced that thousands of dollars' worth of goods were being stolen along the water front. He assigned Loud to the case. He has caused other arrests since he took up the work and the arrests of the two men yesterday came after some weeks of watching. Both men were arrested as they left the Atlantic Transport Line pier, 58 North River. It is believed the men came from the White Star Line, three piers above where they were arrested. The men had with them three quarts of wine in samplers' cans.

They were taken to the Law Division at the Custom House, and from there brought before Commissioner Shields in the Federal building. When arraigned the prisoners admitted the charge. They were held in $500 bail each for the Federal Grand Jury.

WOULDN'T LEAVE THE JAIL.

Kept Coming Back So Often They Sent Him to an Asylum.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., Aug. 2.—Having patiently served forty of a sixty days' sentence in the Burlington County jail, here, Jacob Greenberg, a Trenton junk dealer who was convicted of being cruel to his horse, was pained to-day to learn that his wife had paid the fine and that he was discharged. Now he could have paid that fine of $50 in the first place, but, like Upton Sinclair, he preferred incarceration.

Sheriff Warrell brought him the glad news on his release, but Greenberg received it coldly, and demanded the money his wife had paid over. When this was refused, he flatly declined to leave the jail. He declined all the time they were putting him out, and he kept coming back to show that he meant it.

After he had been ejected three times with considerable difficulty, the authorities saw a light, and packed the man off to the State Asylum in Trenton.

FIRST WOMAN LAWYER DIES.

Mrs. Belle A. Mansfield Was Admitted to the Bar in 1868.

AURORA, Ill., Aug 2.—Mrs. Belle A. Mansfield, 65 years old, the first woman ever admitted to the practice of law in the United States, died suddenly at the home of her brother, Judge W. J. Babb of Aurora, last night.

Mrs. Mansfield was admitted to the Iowa bar in 1868, two years after she was graduated from Iowa Wesleyan University.

Mrs. Mansfield was widely known as an educator. At the time of her death she was the Dean of the College of Arts at De Pauw University, Greencastle, Ind.

HUSBAND SLAIN, SHE SAYS.

Mrs. A. J. Cameron Offers Evidence Against Drowning Theory.

AUGUSTA, Me., Aug. 2.—Refusing to accept the suicide theory, Mrs. Alexander J. Cameron of New York, whose husband's clothing was found on the bank of the Kennebec River yesterday, declared her belief to-day that he had been murdered and robbed.

In support of this contention, she said that she took dinner with him at Gardiner Sunday, and at that time he had a gold watch and chain, a roll of bills of large denominations, and other valuables. He also wore gold cuff links, and these were missing from his white shirt, which was found. He appeared very cheerful, and they planned their annual vacation to Nova Scotia.

The police continued to-day to drag the river for his body. Besides having served as State binder of Maine, Mr. Cameron was for fifteen years the official binder for New York City.

Alexander J. Cameron's office in New York was at 280 Broadway, where he had a publishing business. His home was at 99 Bedford Street.

SAW LAFAYETTE IN 1824.

Pease Is 101 Years Old—Woman of Same Age in Same Town.

NEWARK, N. Y., Aug. 2.—Wayne County claims the distinction of having as citizens two residents who have reached the age of 101 years. They are Mrs. Lavinia Blackmar Allerton of this place, who celebrated her birthday June 12 last, and Charles Pease of Ontario, who was 101 on Aug. 2.

Mr. Pease, in fairly good health and possessed of all his faculties, tells his Ontario friends tales of the days when he saw the great French General, Lafayette, in 1824, of how he visited Rochester when the now flourishing city was a struggling village, and voted for Henry Clay in 1832. He attributes his longevity to abstemious habits.

NO BANK INDICTMENTS LIKELY

Evidence at Union Bank Inquiry Already Passed On Once.

Assistant District Attorney Mitchell May of Brooklyn, who has been following the investigation into the affairs of the Union Bank of that borough, which will be resumed on Monday, said yesterday that in his opinion nothing tangible that would make criminal action advisable had been brought out. Much of what has been stated by witnesses in the present investigation was passed on long ago by the Grand Jury, but no indictments were found. The certificates are forgeries, falsification of records, and juggling of funds in the bank when it was known as the Mechanics and Traders has not been substantiated. No corroborative evidence giving any promise of a conviction has been adduced. It seemed to be the opinion in the District Attorney's office that unless more clear and definite evidence as to guilt and wrongdoing is brought out the investigation will have fallen of its [illegible]
